Fossil Politicians at the Greeley Head-quarters—Men with a Grievance.

Matters were very dull yesterday at the Astor House Greeley head-quarters. Sad and sorrowful are the political mummies preserved therein. What private griefs have the ousted office-holders who frequent the head-quarters? Why sit they in concert, and take counsel together, how best they shall beat Grant and elect Greeley? Let us try to make answer:

First, there is George Van Cleft, who holds a Tammany Hall appointment as City Surveyor; he has been long willing to accept a lucrative office under Grant, but as he cannot get it, he is using his small influence to elect Greeley, from whom he hopes better things. Then there is George Coachmop, who, in addition to hating Grant, understands the art of division (of Tammany spoils) and silence (about silks.) He steps to the front with his influence, which, though like unto the widow's mite, is none the less acceptable to Honest Horace. Then there is the immaculate Christopher Pullman, who went before the Custom-house Investigating Committee in the character of an informer to give testimony about Custom-house employes carrying elections.

Has Christopher a grievance? Ah, yes. He wanted to have an auditor at the Custom-house, who had held the office for twenty-two years, turned out to make room for his modest self. But the auditor was not removed.

John U. Andrews, of Virginia, who led the rioters in 1863, feels competent to lead a Greeley battalion to Washington, and having been a Southern rebel during the war, he naturally flies to the sheltering arms of Horace.

Another man with a grievance is Charles Grant. He was removed from the Custom-house, and was succored in his officeless extremity by the magnates of Tammany Hall, who gave him an unimportant position in the Police Department. He is now a great scribe at the Greeley Head-quarters, and, it is said, still holds his place under the City.

So one might go on to tell of the griefs of John Cochrane, "Gen." Palmer, and other fossilized politicians, whose services to the country are known only to themselves, and are therefore ignored by an ungrateful public, and whose voices in the councils of the Government are silent, because nobody wants to hear them there!

Tammany Roughs Going to Baltimore to Back Greeley.

Free tickets have been distributed this week by the Greeley organizers to those persons who are willing to attend the Baltimore gathering in the interest of the Tammany candidate. A large number of roughs and political rangers-on have expressed a desire to be "dead-headed" to the Convention, and it is probable that they will be accommodated by the Greeley Committee. Doubtless many of them, true to their old habits, will make the excursion a source of profit as well as pleasure. It is understood up-town that the notorious "Rocky" Moore, ex-pugilist and ex-rum seller, will take a gang with him to the Monumental City.

The Anti-Greeley Convention at Baltimore.

We learn that the Anti-Greeley Democrats have secured for their National Convention the Maryland Institute, reported to be the finest hall in Baltimore. The present intention is to hold a private meeting for conference on Monday, and to organize their Convention on Tuesday, at noon.

Head-Quarters at the Astor House—Awful Solemnity at Room No. 14.

The term head-quarters pictures to the mind a scene of bustling activity, of tireless energy, a place full of the bustle of going and coming, where men sit writing from morning until night, where couriers laden with important dispatches arrive every half hour, where eager conversation is held by groups in corners and in the recesses of windows, where great events are forged with great and visible efforts. Such is the idea that one forms naturally of head-quarters, and such an idea is certainly correct. But there are exceptions, and it is possible that head-quarters should be in reality a very different place. To those misguided individuals who believe that Honest old Horace will carry New-York State the Times would recommend a peep at Greeley's head quarters in the Astor-house, any time during the day. Room No. 14 in the Astor House is next to the billiard room, and though this choice of a locality was objected to by some of the Committee, the Chairman poohpoohed the objections as frivolous, and declared the exceptions not well taken. Yet it has turned out that the proximity to the billiard saloon is a source of great annoyance. Room No. 14 is quite cool and well shaded, the very place for a comfortable doze if it were not for the clinking of the balls and the loud laughter of the players. The fine bearded theoretic looking man who writes the addresses on the documents which Mr. Greeley is sending through the country as fast as he can collect money to pay the postage, and who acts generally as Secretary, says that he is rather glad of it, because it keeps him from falling asleep. He comes to the room with the best intentions of sticking to the addresses which he has to write, but the heat gets the better of him and he often feels drowsy. But the visitors who take naps on the old-fashioned sofa opposite the door are greatly disturbed by the noise, and have frequently growled out their vexation that such a locality should have been chosen. It interferes with the delicious stillness of the place, which so impresses the visitors from the country that they speak in whispers as they would at a funeral. Room No. 14 is one of those queer spots which seem to have been forgotten by the bustling world; a quiet quarter filled with a sleepy sense of its being always afternoon there; a room like a school-house during the holidays, when all the boys have left; where obtrusive blue-bottle flies buzz about with annoying energy, where the mice run defiantly across the floor, and where cats sit blinking in conscious security. Sometimes acquaintances of the bearded one come and sit beside him at the vast ocean of round-table where he is perched. They converse in low tones, but cheerfully, and occasionally launch in a cheery way, and then look round apologetically to see if any one has heard them and is offended. Occasionally a bluff Western man comes in, bringing with him an atmosphere of life and energy, and he startles them by his loud tones and his defiant way of bringing his big hand down upon the table. He annoys the bearded man, and perhaps scares him a trifle, for the acting Secretary is very gentlemanly in appearance and very gentle in manner, and shrinks from anything like boisterousness. He is generally relieved by another acting Secretary, who sits in the next room, which is the Chairman's sanctum, and is separated from head-quarters only by folding doors. This confidential Secretary is much more off-hand, and, clapping the friend from the West on the shoulder, asks him if he won't take "suthin'" to which an answer is generally made in the affirmative. Then the twain repair to the bar in the billiard-room, and the Westerner imbibes "suthin'" to strengthen his tissues. If he is a man of importance in his district, he is treated to a cigar, but not of the brand manufactured by Mr. Greeley and Mr. Tweed, because they were made by machinery, and would not draw at all. Cigars, however, are only offered to the really important men, because the treasury at head quarters is low, advances having been declined by Mr. Tweed until the Baltimore nomination. Ju ige Carpenter sits and chats a good deal, of mornings, with the Chairman, and tells him what he knows about Presidential campaigning. Together they read the correspondence which comes over from the Tribune office, while the Private Secretary chooses among the Southern exchanges from the same quarter what he thinks will suit the taste of ardent friends. Rude men come and stand in the door-way and stare as if they expected to find a learned pig secreted somewhere on the premises, but as nobody notices them, they pass on their way and leave head-quarters to its wonted calm. It is a pleasant, quiet place and reminds one of a monastery. Men who are tired of public life and think of retiring into absolute solitude, like Zimmerman, cannot do better than to spend a day here in calm meditation.

Gen. Grant's Silent Deeds—How the Southerners Returned From Brazil.

From the Indianapolis Journal, July 4.

In a speech delivered at Cleveland, Ohio, a few evenings since, Hon. R. C. Kirk, late Minister to the Argentine Republic, mentioned an act of kindness performed by President Grant toward certain ex-rebels, which is not generally known. After the war, a few hundred Southern men, feeling that they could not live under the United States Government, went to Brazil with their families. In a short time many of them became reduced to a condition of absolute starvation, and were eager to get back to the United States, but were unable to do so. In this situation President Grant ordered that all who wished to return should be transported on Government steamers, free of expense, and nearly all of them thus found their way back.

The "Reformers."

From the Chicago Evening Post.

The New-York Greeley supporters include shining stars of polital purity. Vide:

Tweed,	Connolly,
Hall,	Hoffman,
Sweeny,	Barnard,
Garvey,	Winans.

A late accession is Matt Brennan. Matt is a reformer. He owned and ran a dirty dance-house; reformed by running for an office as a Democratic candidate. Naturally, with his antecedents, he was overwhelmingly elected. He became Sheriff. When the halter was prepared for Tweed and Connolly, and Sweeny and Hall, Matt reformed again, and served the warrants when he could no longer find any possible excuse for not looking up the men. When it was obvious Tammany was dead, Matt reformed again, and showed a disposition to devote his unsullied influence on the side of the Reform Legislature which so rapidly slid into Vanderbilt's pocket. Then Matt reformed again, and became a Greeley man.

How Scandals are Manufactured.

Here is the interesting career of a joint slander, invented by the Liberal organs. The wanton and malignant character of the calumny is at last unwittingly confessed in the columns of one of its fathers:

THE REMOVAL OF COLLECTOR PALFREY.

From the Springfield Republican, June 12.

The ax has come down. Mr. Charles W. Palfrey is no longer Collector of the Port of Salem. His only offense was, that, being the editor of a Republican paper in Gen. Butler's district, he did not support that ambitious gentleman, last Fall, in his raid upon the Governorship. To be sure, he was a faithful and capable officer, and had a record as a Republican running back beyond the time when Gen. Butler honored a horse-race by shouting for Jeff. Davis in the Charleston Convention. But all this went for nothing. Gen. Butler demanded his head, and it was promptly forthcoming upon a Treasury Department charger. We ask Mr. George S. Boutwell, in all kindness, whether he can afford this sort of thing much longer?

THE TRIBUNE ADDS A BLUNDER TO THE SLANDER.

From the New-York Tribune, June 13.

The renominators, with the great renomination at their head, have begun to put on the screws after a fashion which it did not require any great prescience to anticipate. Mr. Charles W. Palfrey is a good enough Grant man, and as editor of the Salem Register he has given the Administration a fair support. But it is necessary in that district not only to support Grant, but Gen. Butler; and as Mr. Palfrey couldn't do that with much even of simulated enthusiasm, he has been turned out of his office of Postmaster. So the Administration thinks Gen. Butler worth propitiating, and when he orders a decapitation the Federal guillotine is at once put in motion. We don't condole with Mr. Palfrey, for, under the circumstances, he is better out of office than in.

ONCE MORE.

From the New-York Tribune, June 27.

Mr. Palfrey, Collector of the Port at Salem, was suddenly turned out of the office he had filled with perfect acceptability, because Gen. Butler desired it.

THE SLANDER OVERHAULED AT LAST.

From the New-York Tribune, July 3.

An investigation of the charges against Mr. Palfrey, Collector of Customs at Salem, Mass., develops the fact that the Treasury Department has been for many months in possession of evidence impeaching his integrity and official capacity. It appears that this officer has been in the habit of so manipulating seizures made within his district as to defraud the Government and benefit himself, and the only excuses offered by him have been that he could not understand the revenue laws, and that he had been advised by a Boston Custom-house officer to pursue the course he did. The records, however, show, that although this Boston officer was at once removed, Mr. Palfrey has only recently been requested to resign. The recess of Congress, and consequent impossibility of getting a whitewashing Committee to report upon this case, will doubtless compel Mr. Palfrey's removal, though for some reason Mr. Boutwell seems very unwilling to take this course. Various theories are advanced here regarding the retention of Mr. Palfrey after the establishment of his guilt, among others that Mr. Palfrey's connection with a semi-weekly paper in Massachusetts is not without its influence upon Mr. Boutwell just at this time.

Advice of One of Greeley's North Carolina Friends to the Kuklux.

From the Raleigh (N. C.) Era, July 2.

At Louisburg, Gov. Vance said "that he would sooner be the meanest Kuklux rotting in the Penitentiary, than to be one of the prosecutors or the Judge who tried them."

He further advised his Democratic friends that the best way to succeed in the coming election was by kicking out the Republicans and cause them to fear them. He was asked by a Republican bystander if he meant "politically." He said, "Not at all."

It is plain that he meant literally or personally, and we would say to this gentleman, who fled on a mule, proclaiming as he went, at the approach of Sherman and his army, that the day has passed when free citizens of North Carolina fear kicking out by either him or his Kuklux friends, for whose encouragement this bravado language was used.

Charles A. Dana's Opinion of Gen. Grant, Before he was Refused the Collectorship of New-York.

From Dana's Life of Gen. Grant.

It hardly admits of a question that his education was better adapted to fit him (Grant) for statesmanship than that afforded by most of the higher grades of colleges in this country. The Academy at West Point not only thoroughly tests and trains the intellectual faculties, but its routine of studies embraces law in its application to the ruling of States, the history of nations, political economy and the general science of civil government. He passed the severe ordeal of the Academy with great credit. * * * He has had a seven years' discipline in one of the greatest schools of modern times, wherein he has been constantly engaged in dealing with some of the most intricate concerns, political and military, ever intrusted to the care of a civilian or a soldier.

He is certainly entitled to a place in that class of public men of whom Franklin, Knox, Jackson, Taylor and Lincoln were illustrious types. * * * His enlightened counsels—the actual service he rendered in regard to civil, social, legal and financial matters of unprecedented character and transcendental importance, affecting the interests of large populations and the destinies of powerful States—prove that he possesses abilities and attainments that entitle him to a place among the wise and prudent statesmen of the country.

Again Dana Speaks—Not Having Yet Been Snubbed.

From the Sun, Friday, May 22, 1868.

Grant's name is doubtless a tower of strength to the Republicans, for he has a firm and abiding hold upon the confidence of the people, irrespective of parties. From the hour when, amid the thickest gloom of the war, the victory of Donelson revived the drooping spirits of those who were struggling to preserve the Union, he has had a lodgment in the popular heart from which neither calumny, nor clamor, nor prejudice, nor faction has been able to drive him. Though calculating political leaders may have averted their faces from him, the unselfish sentiment of the nation has never hesitated to regard him as the soldier to whose genius, skill and firmness are due in large measure the salvation of the Republic. Since the close of the war his conduct in the discharge of difficult and delicate trusts has convinced reflecting minds that he is a wise and prudent counselor, not prone to extreme views, but moderate and conciliatory in his policy, and, while clothed with almost autocratic powers over a conquered and prostrate section of the country, so exercising his authority that no citizen has felt the undue pressure of his hand. Throughout this turbulent and trying period he has been scrupulously observant of the laws, never seeking to evade their requirements, but always striving to fulfil their injunctions in the spirit of an urbane and considerate Magistrate.

In the midst of wide-spread venality and corruption, no man has ever doubted his honesty, though he has had almost unlimited control over millions of the public money. His administration as General-in-Chief of the Army, and as Secretary of War ad interim, is not only marked with eminent ability, but distinguished for retrenchment and economy. The President—no partial witness—in his Message of December last to the Senate, says that "salutary reforms have been introduced by the Secretary ad interim, and great reductions of expenses have been effected under his administration of the War Department, to the saving of millions to the Treasury."

Gen. Grant is not a politician, but a patriot. Ever since the downfall of the rebellion he has been anxious for the earliest possible restoration of the insurgent States to their former relations to the Union. He has deprecated the quarrels between the Executive and Legislative departments of the Government, which have tended to retard this work, while on his part he has labored assiduously to bring it to a successful and harmonious close. In this he has exhibited the sterling qualities of a wise and liberal statesman. If he should be elected to the Presidency, all impartial and unprejudiced men, whether radicals or conservatives, and whether dwelling at the North or the South, would feel that the Union and the Constitution were safe in his hands.

A Little Illustration.

From the Milwaukee Wisconsin, July 1.

It is said that Horace Greeley, in a conversation with a friend recently, remarked "that he was much surprised to think the defection in the Republican ranks was no greater than it appears to be at the present time." Like the man who fell off the top of the stage-coach, if Horace had only known the stage hadn't tipped over, he'd never a got off.

The Spoils Palmer Did Not Get.

From the Chicago Journal, July 3.

Gov. Palmer, who turned traitor to the party that elected him, in the foolish hope of being nominated for President at Cincinnati, and who vainly expected to be renominated for Governor by the Springfield Dolly Vardens, is now, it is understood, figuring to "fix up" the next Legislature, with a view to the United States Senatorship, as a stepping-stone, for which he stands about as good a chance as he does of becoming King of the Cannibal Islands. Poor Palmer! Fated Trumbull! The former is the victim of that sort of ambition which "o'erleaps itself," and the latter is the victim of chronic political biliousness.

The Crowd Which Surrounds Him.

From the Watertown Times, July 3.

Tweed, Sweeny, Mayor Hall, Ben. Wood, Mudgett and John Cochrane are foremost in their advocacy of the Cincinnati ticket. It is significant of their expectations. Mr. Greeley is surrounded by men whom the honest voters distrust, and for good reasons. The cry of reform from such a crowd ought not to mislead the people. There is no other explanation of the course of the corruptionists of New-York City than that they prefer Mr. Greeley to Gen. Grant because they think they can use him to better advantage. They are a class of men that are not apt to make mistakes of this kind. They live by this business and they study their subjects well. Voting for their man in the hope that, after all, he will prove true to honest men's purposes, is a visionary dream.

Official Vote of Oregon—Republican Gain, 1,181.

The complete official vote of Oregon at the late election for Congressman is as follows: Republican, 13,163; Democratic, 12,317; Republican majority, 846. Two years ago the Democrats had a majority of 335; Republican gain, 1,181. In the State Senate the Republicans will have two majority, and in the House of Representatives fifteen majority, thus securing the election of a Republican United States Senator in place of Hon. Henry W. Corbett, Republican, whose term expires in 1873.

A Hint from Michigan.

An Orangeville correspondent of the Hastings (Mich.) Banner says: "Greeley has no supporters in the Republican Party of our township, and the Democrats say they will be excused as they prefer to vote for Grant if they must vote for a Republican at all."

POLITICAL NOTES.

The Democratic John A. Griswold is anti-Greeley.

Several Democratic papers in Oregon have declared against Greeley.

The South Carolina Republican State Nominating Convention is to be held in Columbia, Wednesday, Aug. 21.

The Savannah (Ga.) News still clings to Gen. W. S. Hancock as a Democrat who could be elected President.

The Republicans of California will hold a State Convention in Sacramento, Thursday, Aug. 1, to nominate electors.

Col. S. M. Taliaferro, of Stafford County, Virginia, a life-long Democrat, declares in a letter in favor of the election of Grant and Wilson.

The Portland Press says that every sane man who knows anything about Maine knows that it will give Grant and Wilson a majority of thousands.

Among Democratic aspirants for Congress in the Eighth District of Tennessee are W. W. Vaughn, Gen. T. H. Bell, R. P. Caldwell and Gen. A. W. Campbell.

United States Senator Cole was most enthusiastically welcomed on his return to San Francisco, his friends of both political parties joining in the serenade tendered him.

The Columbia Union appeals to the Republicans of South Carolina to secure first a good Legislature, as of even more importance than the election of honest executive officers.

Alex. H. Stephens insists that the Georgia Democracy should feel no more bound by the action of the Baltimore Convention if it indorses Greeley than it would if it adopted the Grant platform.

Alex. H. Stephens republishes Judge Linton Stephens' long and bitter attack on Greeley, and says that the demand for it is very great. One order came from Western New-York for 1,000 copies.

It is asserted that since the close of the rebellion not less than 25,000 persons, black and white, have been scourged, banished or murdered by the Kuklux Klans of the South. There were no Democrats among them.

The Republicans of the First District of Wisconsin have nominated their strongest man for Congress, and the Democrats are at their wits' end to find some body, Democrat or sore-head, who will stand some chance to defeat him.

Hon. A. G. Talbot, Democratic candidate for the nomination for Congress in the Eighth Kentucky District, has bolted the primary election, and declared himself an independent candidate. The regular Democratic nominee will probably be M. J. Durham.

The Buffalo Post, a Democratic journal, says, pointedly: "We are not of those who desire to see the Republican party in the way of political reform; but why are 3,000,000 of sterling Democrats invited to look upon a great feast, and not allowed to partake of it?" The Post wants at least one good Democrat on the ticket nominated at Baltimore.

Glowing accounts have been published of the organization of a Greeley club at the village of Aurora, last Saturday evening, but one of the gentlemen announced as the officers of the meeting, says no meeting was held, and no club formed; that there were no "illuminations," no "band," no discoursing of "patriotic airs," no "addresses" and no anything.

"Bowie-knife" Potter, of Wisconsin, has no idea of supporting Greeley. On the contrary, the Milwaukee Sentinel says he is as sturdy a Republican today as he was when he stood upon the floor of the House of Representatives a dozen years ago to defy Southern bullies, like Roger A. Pryor, and vindicate free speech and the courage of Northern men at the same time.

The Oakland Transcript inquires if Duke Gwin has ever been naturalized. It labors under the impression that in Mexico, where Gwin made a "Duke," he renounced all allegiance to the Government of the United States, and now that he has been sent by the California Democrats as a delegate to Baltimore, it is anxious to have this matter cleared up.

The letter which the Greeley organs are publishing purporting to have been written by Congressman Wilson, of Indiana, to Major Popp, and telling him that he had secured for him the appointment of Mail Agent for Indiana, and that it would afford him a fine opportunity to operate during the pending canvass in the southern part of the State among the Germans, is a forgery.

THE BALTIMORE CONVENTION.

Tammany the Main Stay, as in Former Years.

Preparing for the Great "Shut Your Eyes and Open Your Mouth" Scene—The Press Accommodations Controlled from the Tribune Office.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

Baltimore, July 5.—This Monumental City has its usual Midsummer somnolent appearance. The streets are pleasantly devoid of crowds, the hotels delightfully quiet, and I have had the great satisfaction of not having heard Grant or Greeley mentioned since my arrival this afternoon. From all this it may be inferred that the politicians have not arrived, and such is the fact. At the Carrollton there are not more than a dozen, chiefly from the South; at Barnum's half as many, and one lorn individual hailing from Georgia at the St. Clair. Coming down on the train I thought I caught a glimpse of Hon. S. S. Cox in the crowd of famished passengers rushing after that execrable lunch at Wilmington, but if it were he, he has managed since he got here to hide himself completely, as I have not found him registered at any hotel. But if there be no Democrats of note here just yet, there will be plenty within a day or two. The trouble is that nobody likes to come first lest he should meet some other lonely early bird to whom he must say, "Greeley's our man." Very few of them have the heart to do that sort of thing except in a crowd. So they are waiting for the crowd, when they can shout for Greeley altogether, and thus keep each other in countenance. Tammany is depended on to furnish the cheek and bounce of the affair, so that some exceedingly well-known New-Yorkers will probably be among the first to put in an appearance, and begin that clatter of tongues in hotel public rooms which is a necessary prelude to all National Conventions. A good, strong working force of those who for several years relieved the people of the trouble of governing New-York is to be here, some to-morrow, others on Sunday, but not until Monday morning will they be very numerous. In order that no partiality shall be shown, they shall be named in the order of arrival, so that the people may see who is back of Mr. Greeley.

BUNGLING ARRANGEMENTS.

Arrangements for the Convention have not yet been far advanced by the Resident Committee, and although the Opera-house may look quite handsome, it will not compare with the grand scene presented at Philadelphia. In some respects the management has been bad, and promises to result in difficulties. This will probably be the case with the arrangements for the Press, which were first in the hands of the Resident Committee, were then taken by the National Executive Committee, and are now handed over to the owner of the Opera-house, who, it is announced, will on Monday noon assign seats to the representatives of the Press having proper credentials. It is not likely that this arbitrary proceeding, if it should prove to be such, will give satisfaction, as there are symptoms already of growling. There may be no intention of favoritism, but it is at least extremely likely that this multiplicity of cooks will cause trouble.

THE GREAT DEGLUTITION ACT.

When so few of the delegates have arrived, it is of course impossible to glean any political news of importance. It may be said, however, that there is a general impression, both among these delegates and the resident Democrats, that the whole Cincinnati pill, Greeley, Brown and platform, is to be swallowed without a grimace or a protest. The thing, however, is to be done as decently as possible, and Greeley is to be indorsed by a formal ballot on a call of the States, when he is to get every vote, and be rapturously hailed as the chosen of the Democracy which ran Seymour in 1868, and declared the war a failure in 1864. Brown is to be served in the same fashion, and the Democratic Party having cut its throat in this way, the Cincinnati platform is to be plastered over the wound, in the hope of saving the rash old creature's life. There is to be plenty of enthusiasm—ample arrangement to that end having been perfected in New-York—and the Democratic "Topsey" is going to be exceedingly jolly under the most heartrending circumstances.

THE NEW DEMOCRATIC ORGAN.

The Tribune is to be the great light of the occasion, as an incident will show. Ford, the Opera-house man, insisted on sticking the Associated Press into the orchestra hole; and when Mr. Fox insisted upon places on the platform, Ford answered that it was impossible, as he had received letters from Mr. Whitelaw Reid asking for that space, and he must have it. To the same end I hear an old Democrat, who boasted he had never voted anything but the straight ticket in his life, say tonight that the World was not Democratic enough for him, and he was taking the Tribune now. These are small things perhaps, but they are straws. There will be many more like them within the next three days, and the meaning of all, taken together, is that the Democratic elephant is about to swallow the little wisp of hay labeled "Liberal Republican." E. C.

The German Vote.

The four States in which the German vote will exercise a great influence are Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. The total German vote of these States has been estimated at 124,968, divided as follows:

Pennsylvania	32,029
Ohio	36,578
Indiana	15,611
Illinois	40,750
Total	124,968

The Irish Vote.

The States in which the Irish vote will exert a strong influence are California, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, New-Hampshire, New-Jersey, New-York, Ohio, and Pennsylvania. The total estimated Irish vote of these States is 311,359, divided as follows:

California	9,070	New-Jersey	14,464
Connecticut	11,273	New-York	88,134
Illinois	20,027	Ohio	12,702
Indiana	4,449	Pennsylvania	140,625
Missouri	9,164
New-Hampshire	2,051	Total	311,359

A Ten Hour "Demonstration" from Williamsport Visits Lock Haven, Penn.

Lock Haven, Penn., July 5.—About 150 ten-hour men, headed by their President, arrived here from Williamsport on the morning train, and with martial music marched in an orderly manner past the saw-mills. They stated their purpose to be the formation of a Ten-hour League. This evening they held a mass-meeting in the depot, and returned on the night train.

The Mayor ordered all drinking-saloons closed, and no disturbances occurred. None of the mills here are on strike.

Annual Meeting of the Army of the Tennessee.

Madison, Wis., July 5.—A meeting of the Army of Tennessee was held here yesterday afternoon. Gen. W. T. Sherman was re-elected President, and Col. Dayton, Recording Secretary; Gen. Hickenlooper, Corresponding Secretary, and Gen. Force, Treasurer. Gen. John A. Logan was elected Orator, Toledo, Ohio, was selected as the next meeting-place on the 17th and 18th of October, 1873. Miss Ella Wheeler, the poetess, was presented with a handsome badge of the Society. The banquet at the Park Hotel was of the most sumptuous character, and was greatly enjoyed by the officers and their ladies.

THE FOURTH ABROAD.

Banquet in Geneva to the American Functionaries—Remarks of Mr. Adams—Celebration by Americans in all Parts of Europe.

Geneva, July 5.—The American anniversary was handsomely celebrated here yesterday. The city was gayly decorated. In the evening, a banquet was given to the American functionaries and visitors. Mr. Adams, responding to a toast, expressed his gratification at the work recently terminated, by which the fact of arbitration was established. He said the tendency of this result would be to reverse the traditional policy of nations as to the mode of settling their difficulties.

London, July 5.—The Fourth of July was more generally observed by Americans in Europe this year than ever before. There were special celebrations in this city, and in Edinburgh, Manchester, Liverpool, Paris, Stuttgart, Geneva, and other cities.

Americans in Paris Give a Banquet at the Grand Hotel—Friendly Toasts and Speeches by Americans and Frenchmen.

Paris, July 5.—A banquet was given by the Americans on the evening of the 4th of July, in the elegant saloon of the Grand Hotel. Sixty persons were present. Hon. Elliot C. Cowdin was chairman. Among the guests were Gen. James L. Donaldson, United States Army; J. Meredith Read, Consul-General of the United States at Paris; Col. Evelyn Washburne, son of the American Minister; Mr. Healy; M. Laboulaye, the well-known friend of America, and several eminent French journalists.

The Chairman, on offering the toast to the health of the President of the United States, made an eloquent speech. Recalling the early history of America, he took occasion to pay a warm tribute of praise and gratitude to France, who was the first, and had since been the constant, friend of American independence. He referred to the creation of the Tribunal of Geneva as one of the noblest victories of civilization, and saw in it an exemplification of Richelieu's maxim that differences between nations could be settled without resort to the sword.

A toast to President Thiers and the French Republic elicited great enthusiasm, and, amid the cheers of the company, M. Laboulaye rose to respond to it. He returned thanks for the honor done his country, and acknowledged that the sympathy of the American people for the French in their reverses had been unfailing. He closed his remarks by proposing the following sentiment: "France and the United States—once allies, always friends."

Consul-General Read made a graceful and appropriate response. Colonel Washburne replied to the toast to the health of the American Minister, who was absent, and Gen. Donaldson spoke for the Army and Navy of the United States. Toasts to the memory of Washington and Farragut were drunk in silence. The utmost cordiality prevailed. The Frenchmen vied with the Americans in protestations of friendship, and, amid great good feeling, the company separated at midnight with cheers for the French and American Republics.

Dinner of the American Club in Liverpool—Banquet in the Inns of Court Hotel, London—Comments by the London Telegraph.

Liverpool, July 5.—The American Club of this city celebrated the anniversary of the Declaration of Independence by a dinner at their rooms in the Washington Hotel. The house was gayly decorated with bunting inside and out. Dr. Jerome V. C. Smith, Ex-Mayor of Boston, occupied the chair. Complimentary and friendly toasts were exchanged by the American and English guests, and speeches full of good-will were made on both sides.

London, July 5.—The American residents here had a banquet at the Inns of Court Hotel, last evening, in honor of their national anniversary. Judge Haldeman presided.

The day was also celebrated in Edinburgh, Manchester, and other cities of the Kingdom.

The Daily Telegraph this morning says: "These celebrations of American Independence, which we once sorely begrudged, but of which we are now honestly proud, had a peculiar character yesterday, following so closely the settlement of the dispute over the indirect claims. We think the glorious Fourth is more honored as the anniversary of Vicksburg and Gettysburg. We have certainly forgotten whether the Chesapeake beat the Shannon, or vice versa."

Berlin, July 5.—The cricket club celebrated the Fourth with great spirit, yesterday. There were no general festivities at the American Legation or Consulate.

THE WEATHER.

Synopsis and Probabilities.

Washington, D. C., July 5—8 P. M.—The lowest barometer, which was Thursday afternoon central in New-York, has apparently moved north-eastward into Maine, and the pressure has risen throughout the Mississippi Valley. The cloud and rain over the Middle and Eastern States has very generally cleared away, with prevailing west and north-west winds, cooler and dryer air. Numerous local storms prevailed during Thursday night on the Gulf and South Atlantic coasts, and are now again reported from the latter region, with indications of a severe storm over Chesapeake Bay. The temperature has changed but little from the South Atlantic coast to the North-west. It has fallen in the Middle and risen in the Eastern States. Telegraphic reports for Friday afternoon have not yet been received from stations west of Alabama.

PROBABILITIES.

The barometer will probably continue without material change other than a slight fall on Saturday throughout the Mississippi Valley and the Gulf States, with increasing cloudiness in the former region, and increasing humidity and temperature in the latter; north-westerly winds, with clear and pleasant weather, prevail in New-England; south-west winds on the lower lakes.

The Greeley National Executive Committee.

There is a show of activity around the head-quarters of the Liberal Republican Executive Committee, Glenham Hotel, Fifth-avenue. Col. Ethan Allen, the Chairman, having more funds at his command than the Astor House Committee, keeps up an appearance of business. It is certain that the most liberal Tammany subscriptions have been made for the benefit of this Committee. Tweed is secretly in sympathy with it. Major Orange H. Stevens, whose Tammany pedigree has been given at length, is still at work collecting the sinews of war.

This Committee are preparing to deluge the country with what Mr Greeley knows about political dodges. It is certain that what he has said about Grant and his claims to the confidence and gratitude of the people will not be included among the documents. Seventeen thousand of these prosy campaign pamphlets have been sent away. Major Staples, head-quarters Secretary, assured our reporter that the postage had been paid on them. The unfortunate fate of the Astor House Committee's documents probably prevented their being franked.

Murder and Suicide in California.

San Francisco, Cal., July 5.—Nicholas E. Carr Taylor, residing at the Mission Dolores, murdered his wife, with whom he had lived unhappily on account of her former life, by stabbing her yesterday, and stabbed himself seven times, and opened his left arm, but was found today still living, though mortally wounded. The house presented a shocking spectacle, blood being scattered around everywhere. After killing her he laid her out on the floor, placing a pillow under her head.

Execution of a Murderer.

Louisville, Ky., July 5.—Thomas Guthrie, colored, was hanged at Danville, at noon, today, for murder, in the presence of nearly 4,000 people. He made a speech concerning his spiritual condition, but no allusion to the murder. Life was extinct in fifteen minutes. The body hung thirty minutes.

Murderous Affray Between Discharged Railroad Blacksmiths in Missouri.

Leavenworth, Kansas, July 5.—A murderous affray occurred at the railroad freight-house at Trenton, Mo., on Wednesday afternoon, between four discharged blacksmiths, resulting in the death of one and the fatal wounding of another. John Lanigan struck Robert Blakely with a hatchet, and Robert Cavanagh stabbed Lanigan with a knife, killing him. Cavanagh also cut M. Larkin because he was the friend of Lanigan. Cavanagh and Blakely were both arrested. All the parties had been drinking.

THE FISK MURDER.

The Theories of Self-Defense and Insanity.

Evidence to Show that Stokes' Life was Threatened—His Persecution by Fisk—The Rencontre Accidental.

The trial of Edward S. Stokes for the murder of James Fisk, Jr., was resumed before Judge Ingraham, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, yesterday. Several witnesses were examined for the defense, but none of those on whose testimony it depends for an acquittal of the prisoner have yet been placed upon the stand. The prosecution was conduced by District-Attorney Garvin, assisted by Messrs. Beach and Fullerton, and the prisoner was represented by Messrs. Tremaine, McKeon, Dailey and Townsend. The following is a full report of yesterday's proceeding:

At the commencement of the proceedings, yesterday, the depositions of Thomas Hart and John Redmond, taken before the Coroner's Jury, and which have been already published, were read for the purpose of contradicting their testimony given on the actual trial.

TESTIMONY OF CORONER YOUNG.

Nelson W. Young, Coroner, testified in reply to Mr. McKeon: I held the inquest on the body of Col. Fisk; the questions put by the counsel for the prisoner were in writing, but questions put by myself were verbal; the evidence was taken by a stenographer to have it thoroughly correct; the evidence was signed by the different witnesses without their reading it.

Q.—Did you see Messrs. Fullerton and Beach there? Objected to.

WITNESS—I remember asking written questions sent up to me by yourself and Mr. Graham; my attention was first called to Messrs. Beach and Fullerton by your objecting to questions put by them; I have not read the testimony taken there, and can't say whether it is correct or not; I took the statement of Lawrence Carr, the hackman, who I understand has since died.

JUSTICE BIXBY'S TESTIMONY.

Butler H. Bixby, examined by Mr. McKeon—I am a Police Justice, presiding at Yorkville Police Court; there was a complaint made before me by a person named Mansfield against Fisk, and examinations took place several times before me in the last year; the complaint was made in November and the several examinations extended to the 6th of January; I produce the complaint and the warrant in that case; there was a hearing before me on the 6th of January; Miss Mansfield and Miss Williams were in attendance; Stokes was examined as a witness that day and the proceedings terminated about two o'clock; Mr. Beach was present as counsel for Fisk; the complaint was made by Josephine E. Mansfield against Fisk for libel; there was an affidavit read in Court which was sworn to by a man named King; Fisk was present at one hearing, but by consent he was permitted to leave; the final day's examination was held on the 15th November.

Q.—Can you give me, as near as you can, the time at which all these parties left the Court-room on the afternoon of the 6th of January? A.—It was about half-past one or two o'clock; I remember the time Mrs. Mansfield, Col. Fellows, Miss Williams and Stokes drove away; I did not see them enter the carriage, because I was in another part of the building at the time.

Q.—When this complaint was made by Mansfield, was Stokes present? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Were any directions given with regard to the arrest of Fisk? Objected to.

Mr. McKEON—We want to show that so far from entertaining a vindictive spirit toward Fisk, Stokes did not desire to have Fisk taken away from his business, and so expressed himself.

The question was excluded by the Court.

TESTIMONY OF FRANCIS M. BIXBY.

Francis M. Bixby testified in reply to Mr. Tremaine—I recollect seeing Stokes on the afternoon of the 6th of January last; I saw him also that forenoon at the Yorkville Police Court; he called upon me at my office, No. 4 Warren-street.

Q.—State to what purpose he called upon you for. Objected to by the District-Attorney.

Mr. McKEON said that this was the last man who saw the prisoner before he stepped into the carriage, and he meant to prove by him that when Stokes came down-town he went into the office of Mr. Bixby to see if he had received any information in relation to proceedings against Stokes by the Grand Jury.

The Court permitted the question and the witness answered—He said that I had heard anything in regard to his being indicted by the Grand Jury on the complaint of Fisk; I told him I heard the matter was before the Grand Jury, but that it was dismissed.

Q.—Did he say what he was going to do? Objected to.

Mr. Tremaine said the theory of the prosecution was this: That Stokes started on a mission of death; that he drove past the opera-house for the purpose of seeking Fisk; that he then proceeded to the Grand Central Hotel, and that while prowling about in the hall in search of his victim he is filled with a malicious intent. On the other hand, it was sought to be proven that the meeting was altogether accidental. He was engaged in a different purpose, he had different intentions, and the point now raised was this, whether the defense was to be excluded from showing the declarations made by the prisoner at the different steps during the journey down to Fisk's, to the time of the shooting. Was there any rule of justice or propriety in not permitting him to put in evidence these natural declarations, which formed a complete chain of evidence? Stokes, it asserted, went to the Grand Central Hotel for the purest and best purposes, and he submitted that his declarations immediately prior to the shooting were admissible. He had no more intention of meeting Fisk than he had of meeting the dead, and of the truth of this they would satisfy the jury.

Mr. Garvin called attention to the case of the People vs. Real, where the same point was raised, but it was overruled by the Court of Appeals, on the principle that a party shall not have it in his power to manufacture a defense for himself when he was preparing to take the initiatory steps in the commission of the great crime which he allege in this case. He could plot the whole defense in his own turn of thought, and he goes on with the preparation for a great crime. The whole tenor of the evidence showed he was waiting for Fisk. He pursued him the whole afternoon, he came into the Grand Central Hotel and if this principle now asserted was to be carried out, everybody even while contemplating murder could form a complete and perfect defense.

Mr. Tremaine expressed his astonishment that the discussion on an interlocutory question should have given the District-Attorney an opportunity to say that the interests of justice should require him to enter upon an argument upon the ex parte, distorted and perverted statement put in by Stokes' counsel in the part of the prosecution. The District-Attorney attempted to prove that Stokes went to this hotel for the purpose of assassinating Fisk, and when we produce evidence to show he went there for no such purpose, by his own declarations, he was met by this objection. With two of the ablest counsel in the State to assist and aid and advise, the District-Attorney sought to continue to keep the padlock on the prisoner's mouth, and all this was the result of the testimony of that little, perjured Thomas Hart, who was brought into this Court by an unseen and unknown power. There was a power behind the throne which they were determined to unmask, and in this view they professed against the objection of the District-Attorney, which would practically shut the mouth of the prisoner and deprive him of his just rights.

Mr. Garvin remarked that the counsel for the other side attached much importance to the fact that private counsel were associated with him for the prosecution. In the great trial of Cole in Albany Mr. Tremaine was private counsel and not only prosecuted once but twice.

Mr. TREMAINE—I appeared on the direct employment of the Attorney-General. I was never private counsel in a criminal case.

Mr. GARVIN—What is the difference between getting it out of the State and out of a private individual? Money, blood-money from the State was just as good gold as that from the pocket of a private individual. His associates were as honorable as any in the profession, and I would not change them if they were appointed by the Attorney-General. His associate admitted this morning he prosecuted with Col. Fellows.

Mr. McKEON—I meant to say I was never private prosecutor in a murder case.

Mr. GARVIN (warmly)—The gentleman appeared in the case of Cuscini, and he now howls and growls and starts, when his own pocket is filled with bloody money.

Mr. McKEON—I was employed by the State.

Mr. Garvin continued to say that did not affect the merits of the case, and having adverted to the question of the admissibility in evidence of the declarations of the prisoner, he maintained they should be excluded.

Judge INGRAHAM—It is right to give these declarations in connection with the res gesta, but this is not a declaration in connection with the res gesta. It is a declaration made previously, and one of those declarations which in my judgment cannot be given at this time. As regards the private counsel, I desire that no further reference should be made to them during the trial.

Mr. Tremaine asked the witness if, during the conversation he had with Mr. Stokes in the afternoon of the 6th of January, he said anything, and if so, what, in relation to his intention to go to Providence on Tuesday, as a reason given for making the inquiry in regard to the indictment? Objected to and excluded.

TESTIMONY OF RUFUS F. ANDREWS.

Rufus F. Andrews was called to the stand after Mr. Bixby, and testified in relation to an interview which took place between himself and Stokes on the 6th of January, in the former's office, at a quarter to three.

Mr. McKeon said he proposed to show by the witness that he (Stokes) came to make inquiries in relation to the indictment.

The question as to Stokes' inquiry about the indictment was objected to, but allowed by the Court. The witness said: He asked me if I knew whether an indictment had been found against him by the Grand Jury of the Oyer and Terminer; I told him that so far as I had been able to ascertain there had not; he then asked me whether, if an indictment was obtained, he could be ——. Objected to on the ground that it was another question, but allowed, and the witness repeated:

He then asked me whether if an indictment was obtained he could be brought from Rhode Island by a requisition; I told him ——

Judge INGRAHAM—There, stop.

Q.—What further did you say to him? A.—I simply told him ——. Objected to by the District-Attorney.

Mr. McKEON—Now, sir, I intend to hold the District-Attorney to his official responsibility. We are trying a man for his life, and everything connected with the transaction should be developed. I want to know if it is in obedience to his duty to the power behind him that he excludes me from putting the question. (Excitedly.) I hold you and the men whose hands are on your throat to their responsibility.

Judge INGRAHAM—I have endeavored repeatedly, Mr. McKeon, to stop this. I have insisted on it on the part of the District-Attorney, and I insist on it on your side. Such remarks must not be made to the prosecution.

Mr. McKEON—Recollect, Sir, we are defending a man for his life.

Judge INGRAHAM—That is no reason at all.

Mr. McKEON—I mean to say that the District-Attorney holds in his hands life and death.

Judge INGRAHAM—Neither the counsel nor the Court are to dictate to the District-Attorney the course he should pursue.

Mr. McKEON—There is a responsibility higher yet.

Mr. McKeon then asked the questions, What was his further answer? Did you advise him that he could leave town? Did he say if he was indicted he would not leave town? Did he say that he was going to Providence for the purpose of attending a trial in relation to a debt, on the Tuesday following? All of which were excluded by the Court and exceptions taken.

TESTIMONY OF GEO. W. COTTERILL.

Geo. W. Cotterill, the next witness examined, swore to having met Stokes at the Hoffman House on the 6th of January last, at fifteen or twenty minutes to three P. M.; he saw Stokes pass to the telegraph office and take up a blank dispatch, and there he left him: Stokes asked him some question in reference to the Long Branch boat. The question itself was excluded by Judge Ingraham. A question was also put to him by stokes in relation to Eatontown; he told Mr. Stokes it was Eatontown, and not Eatonville, there being no station at Eatonville.

Q.—Did you answer him at what time the boat left for Long Branch that afternoon? A.—No, Sir; a person in the office answered it.

Q.—Do you recollect his asking you how he could reach Eatontown? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell him he could telegraph? Objected to.

Q.—Did you not hear him say that he would have no time to go by boat that afternoon; he had to go to another place for papers? [Excluded.]

Q.—Do you know the fact that Eatontown, near there is a race-course? [Objected to as immaterial.]

Mr. McKEON—I want to show that it was there he expected to find the man he sought.

Ruled out by the Court.

GEO. W. ROBERTS' TESTIMONY.

Geo. W. Roberts, clerk in the Western Union Telegraph office, No. 145 Broadway, produced, by order of the Court, the telegrams passing through the office on the 6th of January inst. One was from the office in Eatontown, N. J., to the New-York office, another was from the Hoffman House to Eatontown, N. J., and the third was a "relay copy," or message sent from the Hoffman House to No. 145 Broadway, and thence to Eatontown, N. J. The contents of the telegrams were, upon the objection of the District-Attorney that they were immaterial and irrelevant, excluded. Mr. McKeon said he simply wanted to show what Stokes was about the whole of the day. Judge Ingraham refused to allow them to be read, as also the name of the person to whom they were addressed.

The Court then took a recess.

AFTER THE RECESS.

After the recess, the evidence of Lawrence Carr, a witness before the Coroner's inquest, was read.

Samuel McLoughlin testified—I was at the Hoffman House on the 6th of January last, between three and four o'clock; I saw the prisoner there; I had been assisting him in this case in the Court of Appeals, and had some of the evidence for him; I procured it from Mr. Doty, who lived down at Eatonville; I handed him Schaub's evidence, but not that of Doty; I gave him Schaub's, Sommerdyke's and Jerome's names as witnesses.

The District-Attorney objected.

Mr. TREMAINE—I propose to show that he told him he would find those persons who knew of this bet near the corner of Broadway, and that he followed it up by going there. You don't object to that?

The COURT—You told him where to find those persons?

WITNESS—Yes, at the corner of Amity-street and Broadway.

Q.—You say you had been in pursuit of these witnesses the day before? A.—Yes; I understood Mr. Stokes had a room at the Hoffman House; when I went to the Hoffman House I saw him standing by the office—near the telegraph office; he was standing by the place where he would naturally be if he was about to send off a telegraphic dispatch; he came up and told me he had telegraphed to Mr. Doty. [Objected to.] I saw him leave the house; he went out into Twenty-fourth-street, through the bar-room.

Q.—Did he tell you where he was going? A.—He said he was going down.

Judge INGRAHAM—Stop, stop.

Q.—Did he say he was going down to Twenty-third-street to get some papers in relation to this matter? Objected to. Exception taken.

Q.—How long have you known Stokes? A.—Eight or ten years.

Mr. TREMAINE—Did you ever hear him say anything in relation to Fisk killing him? We offer that, Your Honor, under this issue of insanity.

The COURT—(to District-Attorney)—What have you to say to that?

DISTRICT-ATTORNEY—We object. They have not fixed time or place.

THE COURT—There must be a limit.

WITNESS—It was then, or three or four weeks before this happened. (The shooting.)

THE DISTRICT-ATTORNEY—They must offer a good deal more than that to show insanity; a man might manufacture testimony in this way three or four weeks before, and then walk up to a man and shoot him; that won't do.

Mr. TREMAINE—On the issue of insanity, if I understand the rule, we have a right to show whatever was said by the prisoner before, at the time, and even after the homicide. Now we propose to show that this prisoner declared that he knew he was pursued by Fisk, and that Fisk was armed to strike him down.

The COURT—I think there is no foundation yet for the issue of insanity.

Q.—Do you know the fact that men were in pursuit of him? Objected to.

Mr. TREMAINE—I offer to show that the deceased drew a pistol upon the prisoner in the hotel; I offer to show that the prisoner considered his life in danger, and that the fact of his being pursued by ruffianly-looking persons was known to the prisoner as well as to others.

The COURT—You have, no doubt, a right to prove your two first propositions.

The District-Attorney objected to any evidence being given in regard to the character of the deceased. To state that a person was rash, savage, quarrelsome, would not justify a private citizen in taking upon himself the province of the Government in the punishment of crime. However bad or desperate a man's character may be, he forfeits no right to life until by actual attempt or demonstration at the time of killing he induces a reasonable belief on the part of the slayer that he intends to kill him or do him some bodily harm. That is the rule in this State; that is the rule by which we must be governed in this case. The fact that there were threats is no defense. They must begin by showing actual danger.

Mr. TREMAINE—The State declares the taking of human life is justifiable when there was reason to suppose, on the part of the person so taking it, that he was in danger of the infliction of great personal harm. The question then is, what are the grounds upon which the prisoner acted? Was he actuated with the idea of self-defense; or was he actuated from depravity? Well, then, we may show the appearance—the dangerous character of Fisk, as a vindictive, dangerous man; we may show that that was known to the prisoner; we may also show that threats of his had been communicated to the prisoner; we may show that the prisoner was followed by ruffianly men; we may show that the prisoner was aware that Fisk in his character of a vindictive man had exercised vengeance against those who came in his way; we may show that this preyed upon his mind. The counsel then cited a number of authorities in support of the views he had brought forward.

The Court agreed that it would be proper to admit any testimony calculated to show the motives under which the prisoner acted.

The following questions were offered by the defense, and excluded by the Court: Did the prisoner say to you three or four weeks before this affair that Fisk intended to kill him? Did he say that he had knocked Eaton on the head, and he knew he had sent men after him? Did he ask you to go with him down-town, as he was afraid to go alone?

Exceptions taken to the rulings of the Court. The witness was directed to stand down for the present.

TESTIMONY OF DANIEL P. INGRAHAM.

Daniel P. Ingraham, Jr., testified: I knew Mr. Stokes; I knew of his arrest for embezzlement at the instance of Col. Fisk; on the 6th of January last I saw him at Chamberlain & Dodge's, on Broadway, near Washington-place; it was about four o'clock in the afternoon; he was talking with a gentleman; he came up and shook hands with me; I asked him to go up Broadway with me; he said he had to go down to the corner of Amity-street and Broadway; he then went out; I walked away to go up-town; I saw Col. Fisk in his carriage near Astor-place; I recognized him; I bowed to him; I do not know whether he recognized me.

TESTIMONY OF JAMES BRENNAN.

James Brennan testified: I have been in the House of Refuge; I was brought down to the House of Detention as a witness in a case of homicide; I was then taken to the Tombs; while I was at the House of Detention I made the acquaintance of Thomas Hart; I had conversations with him in relation to the murder of Fisk; he told me that he knew nothing about the murder; that he was in another part of the hotel at the time it occurred; he said he saw Stokes going in a particular direction, and that is all he knew about it; he said he was to have $1,000 and be fixed for the rest of his life if he would answer as he was told to; that was the reason, he said, why he testified before the Coroner's Jury; he said he would make his friends get me out of prison if I would say nothing about this.

In cross-examination the District-Attorney elicited the fact that the charge on which this witness was committed to the House of Refuge was that of stealing a watch. He had been committed ten or twelve times before.

Q.—Did he tell you at that time that the prisoner, Stokes, came up to the ladies' entrance? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did he tell you he came along the wall through the hall? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did he say he saw Stokes shoot Mr. Fisk? A.—Yes, Sir.

The counsel for the prisoner had by this time become quite restive, and Mr. Tremaine objected to any questions being asked except about the conversation as to which they had interrogated the witness. The counsel were considerably relieved when the witness volunteered the statement that Hart told him two different stories. The District-Attorney was proceeding with his cross-examination, when he was interrupted by Mr. Tremaine and Mr. McKeon simultaneously.

The Court (rapping vigorously with the gavel)—Gentlemen, you are exceedingly out of order.

DISTRICT-ATTORNEY (to counsel)—You seem to have a wonderful affection for this witness.

Mr. TREMAINE—Not so much as you have—you have kept him at hand a long time.

Mr. McKEON—I have taken every means to test the veracity of this witness.

Mr. McKeon re-examined the witness, eliciting from him the fact that he had been appointed a monitor at the House of Refuge for good conduct. He then reiterated his statement that Hart told him he saw Stokes shoot Fisk, and afterward said he was in a different part of the hall, putting up a globe he had been cleaning, when he heard two shots fired, and, going in that direction, met Stokes, who said, "A man is shot in the hall—run quick for a doctor." Then he did not see Stokes, because he fled straight from his actions, and because no one else came from that direction, that it was he who had done the shooting. Hart, in telling his first story to witness, which afterward said was false, stated that he was behind Stokes when he fired. I asked him, said the witness, why he hadn't pushed Stokes down-stairs. He said he wished he had, for then he would get plenty of money from Fisk for saving his life. He said the reason why he had sworn as he had was because a man told him at the Coroner's inquest if he would do so, he would give him $1,000 and fix him right for the rest of his life. I told him he must be careful, or he might go to state Prison. He said, "Oh! I aint scared; some of the biggest men in the City are my friends."

JOHN P. REDMOND, RECALLED.

Q.—By Mr. TREMAINE—Did you see this last witness, James Brennan? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you recollect talking with him about what you knew about this Fisk affair? A.—No, Sir; I have spoken to him, but nothing about the affair.

Q.—Did you say to him while you were there in that place that at the time Fisk was shot you were there, and you were so scared that you knew nothing at all about the transaction? A.—No, Sir.

JAMES BRENNAN, RECALLED.

Q. By Mr. TREMAINE—Did you have a conversation with this boy Redmond, at the House of Detention? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did he tell you he were there at the time Fisk was shot, but that he was so scared that he knew nothing about the transaction? A.—Yes, Sir.

REDMOND RECALLED AGAIN.

By Mr. McKEON—After the firing do you recollect being taken over to the Station-house, in Mercer-street? A.—Yes, Sir; I was taken into a room and seated there; the Captain's room.

[Here Bailey, a former witness, was directed to stand up.]

ANOTHER ESCAPE FROM JAIL.

Two Daring Thieves Break Their Way Through Their Cell-Window at the Tombs—Full Particulars of the Occurrence.

Not two weeks ago two boys, charged with riot in the House of Refuge, on Ward's Island, squeezed through their cell-window in the Tombs, and, by means of a blanket, escaped. On Thursday night, between 11 and 11½ o'clock, two daring and desperate thieves confined in the Tombs escaped by almost the same means, which, however, in this instance were kindly provided for them by the authorities. Cell No. 89, on the third tier of the main building, was occupied by George Keele, of No. 542 West Fifty-fourth-street, charged with grand larceny and assault with intent to kill. Keele robbed a store in Eighth-avenue, where he was employed as clerk, and on being pursued by the proprietor, fired several shots at him. With Keele in the cell was also William Langton, of No. 129 Mott-street, charged with having stolen a large quantity of wearing apparel. At 11 o'clock on Thursday night Deputy Warden Orr saw the prisoners in their cell, and at 11½ the night-keepers Golden and McCaffrey found that they had escaped. They had wrenched a leg off their iron-bedstead, and forced off the plate of iron used as a ventilator on the window of the cell. This added an inch to the aperture, making the window 6½ inches in height by 28 inches in width. Since the escape of the House of Refuge boys from the prison workmen have been engaged putting bars into the cell windows of the prison. On Thursday they were putting bars into the window of the cell directly over the one occupied by Langton and Keele. After forcing off the plate the prisoners got through the window and lowered themselves by means of the rope-scaffold which the workmen had left behind to the roof of the cook-house directly beneath, and from thence gained the yard. There they procured a ladder and ascended to the top of the prison-wall, looking out on Elm-street, down which they lowered each other by means of the rope, and so escaped. The Police are in search of them.

Hell Gate—Progress of the Works There—The Final Explosion.

The work which is to culminate in the removal of the Hell Gate obstructions may now be considered as more than half accomplished. It is thought that about fifteen or eighteen months will yet be required to complete it, but this cannot be done unless Congress makes additional appropriations. The subject will be pressed at the opening of the next session, and it is not believed that a work of so much importance will be allowed to stop. The work is a wonderful piece of engineering.

Viewed from the head of the stairway, it reminds one of a railroad engine-house, being semicircular in form, and having ten embrasures, with tracks leading back to the terminus of the tunnels. A turning-table in the centre of the shaft makes the simile all the more complete. Only ten tunnels are visible from the outside, but there are sixteen all told, six commencing in the interior of the work. Four galleries or intersecting tunnels are now completed, and the fifth has been commenced, thus leaving the rock above, which is about ten feet thick, resting on solid columns. Some of these columns have already been pierced for the reception of nitro-glycerine. The main tunnels are numbered and named as follows: Farragut, Madison, Humphrey, Hoffman, Sherman, Jefferson, Grant, McClellan, Franklin and Jackson. As usual, Gen. Grant is ahead, the tunnel bearing his name being 230 feet long. The aggregate length of these excavations exceeds 3,000 feet. The depth of the shaft is 34 feet.

Visitors to the works should by no means go in their best clothes. The leakage from above is so great that the pumps are kept constantly going, and even with the use of an umbrella the incautious investigator is likely to come out with his clothes considerably the worse for the journey. Supplied with a candle, the visitor gropes his way through the dark, sometimes descending at an angle of about forty-five degrees, until he reached the dim light at the end of the tunnel. Here the workmen are found, some drilling and others shoveling up the loose stones.

If he is fortunate enough to get into the gallery where the diamond drill is in operation, he will be well paid for his trouble, although it does deafen him with noise. There are two drills of this kind here, but one is now undergoing repair. The bore made by this machine is an inch and a half in diameter, and the cores, sometimes four feet in length, are taken out entire. After the drilling being over, the next thing in order is the blasting, which occurs three times a day, and is now done altogether with nitro-glycerine. When powder is used the stones are so large that the use of the hammer is necessary, whereas the glycerine breaks them into fine pieces.

When the charges are to be exploded, a gong is sounded, the workmen retreat to a place of safety previously indicated, and an electric battery does the work of explosion. The thundering, smothered sound of the successive charges, forcibly reminds the visitor of a battery of forty-pounders in full play. When the volumes of smoke have disappeared, the workmen return, and the operation of separating and removing the debris are resumed. Specimens of stone can be procured from the miners, or from the piles of rock on the shore. Garnets, mica and quartz abound.

The apprehensions of danger, when the general explosion takes place, are entirely groundless, so confident, Mr. REMERSCHIEDT, the general superintendent of the work, of this fact, that he intends to remain in his office, about 300 feet from the shaft, when the final charge is exploded. On completion of the work of excavation and the nitro-glycerine ready, the coffer-dam will be cut, and, as it is easier to raise a weight under water than above it, the shaft and mine will be flooded, and with the discharge of the electric spark the dangers of Hell Gate will no longer exist. But should the explosion by any accident not prove successful, or, indeed, if it should never take place, there will still be sufficient room for the largest ocean steamers to pass through the shaft after the coffer-dam shall have been cut.

The California Mustang.

A California paper, which fears that the native California horse will soon be numbered among the things of the past, says:

"With all his defects he has some qualities and points of rare value that should be preserved. He can thrive and subsist where the American or English bloods would starve; is fleet, and, if well directed, the mule, while his powers of endurance in the harness or under the saddle are unequaled. He is small of stature, but as symmetrical as the Arabian; wild by nature, and often vicious, but always spirited, and, with proper training and kind treatment, frequently exhibits all the affectionate sensibilities of the best breeds. It is no uncommon feat for him to carry a good rider 100 miles in a day, and it is claimed that many of them can go much further in that time. We have seen specimens that, at the age of sixteen years, were as gay and fiery as the best blooded five-year olds, and that would still the most enduring of them on a short or long journey. As saddle horses they are preferred by all who know them best, as they are also for all light work. It has always seemed to us passing strange that no attempt has ever yet been made in California to preserve the admirable qualities of this ancient stock of horses as to permit them to ignobly perish, as now seems likely, would be as singular as unfortunate."

The Liberty-Street Explosion—Inquest on Fireman Burke.

Coroner Schirmer held an inquest yesterday in the case of Edward Burke, the fireman of Engine Company No. 4, who died from injuries received on the 22d ult., in the explosion of chemicals at the laboratory of Geo. A. Erkenbach, at No. 18 Liberty-street. A number of witnesses were examined, but the testimony was similar to that which was given before Fire Marshal McSpedon, and which has been already published. It was shown that the explosion was caused by the contents of a carboy of nitrous ether leaking through the dilapidated flooring into the restaurant below, where it ignited by the vapor coming in contact with the gas-light. The jury censured Mr. A. M. Lyon, the owner of the building, for not making the necessary repairs to the floor, after having been repeatedly requested to do so.

Fire in West Twenty-Seventh-Street.

At 1:40 A. M. yesterday a fire occurred in the distillery and dwelling of Jos. McConnell, No. 225 West Twenty-seventh-street, and the flames spread so rapidly that Mrs. McConnell, the wife of the occupant, leaped out of a second-story window to the ground and was seriously injured. The damage to the stock and furniture is estimated at $2,000; insured for $2,250 in the Star Company. The fire extended to the apartments of Michael Nicholas, on the upper floor. Damage to the furniture, $1,000. The building is owned by Wm. Meyers, and is damaged to the extent of $500; insured.

AMONG THE LOWLY.

Visit to the Poor Children of the First Ward.

Joyous Reception of the News of the Coming Excursions—Misery and Foul Air—The Little Coffin—Tenements.

A recent visit to the parents of children living in the Sixth Ward resulted in so favorable a manner as to induce a visit to the same class of persons living in the First Ward. In company with Officer Connors of the Twenty-seventh Precinct, a TIMES reporter visited quite a large number of families yesterday in the tenements of Washington-street. The first visits were made with some distrust of the favorable results; but when the children began to thoroughly understand the object of the call, they rushed around with the tidings that all the children were to "go on a picnic." In the first house visited there were at least sixteen families, some of them containing as many as seven children. After fully explaining that the object was to provide the children with pleasure, free of expense to the parents, several of the women promised that they would send their little ones if they knew of any of their neighbors doing the same. Leaving this house the children pressed forward to the next tenement, and while the object of the visit was being repeated, their alib prattling soon revealed the project to the other children, and proved quite powerful in enlightening the older persons. Some of the women suggested the bath, and said they would prefer taking or sending the little ones daily to that rather than part with them for one day to take a trip to the country. Others said they had no time, and indeed the evidence of their telling the truth was visible in huge bundles of soiled or damp clothing that they had brought home to wash. Two or three were rudely independent, saying they could send their "childer" to the country themselves if they wished to have them go; while two timid, over-worked women, with seven children each, feared a repetition of some of the disasters their imagination had magnified to an unlimited extent. Leaving these premises the reporter went to some others where the prospect of having the children enjoy a trip to the country was hailed with delight, one anxious mother declaring she would spread the news far and wide that some kind gentlemen and ladies would aid them in giving their little ones a breath of air outside the heated tenement walls. Further on the objections grew less frequent, and suspicion less apparent, until in the end a goodly number of tired mothers and sickly-looking children began to rejoice in the prospect of a pleasure trip, and inquiries grew thick and fast of when, where, and how they could all have the benefit of the proposed treat. In one apartment foul air, the late intense heat and want had done their work, and the result was lying in a little coffin, covered with a white sheet. The neighbors sat around in sad sympathy with the sorrowful mother, whose only regret was that she could not have had her "dead pet" go to the country long ago, and perhaps have saved its life. She hailed with delight the prospect of giving her remaining two little ones the unwonted pleasure denied the dead; but spoke in subdued tone, not in reverence of death, but in fear of the brutal husband and father, who sat at the foot of the little coffin, adding fuel to the fires of intoxication that already burnt fiercely in every vein. Although many of the tenements visited yesterday bore evidence of an attempt at cleanliness not exhibited in those of the Sixth Ward, the air was stifling, and the heat almost beyond endurance. Many of the women, as well as the children, were as nearly nude as decency would permit, their faces, necks and arms covered with the prickly heat to such an extent that an ordinary observer might have judged them to be suffering from some horrible eruption. After conferring on the inmates of the tenements between Liberty and Morris streets, our representative returned through Washington-street to find that the object of the visit had become the topic of general discussion, and had also begun to gain upon the confidence of the people, many of the children crying as they passed their mothers' doors to join on the excursion if Susie or Johnnie Brown was going.

Water facilities in these buildings are on a par with the same class of houses in other parts of the City. One house had water on the different floors; all the others were supplied from hydrants in the basements or adjoining yards. The apartments or tenements occupied by each family is about eighteen by ten feet. In one and in some cases two windows opening to the outer air from the larger room, and occasionally a small window opening into the hall to afford ventilation to the dark hole where the beds are piled one upon the other, to be thrown upon the floor for the use of the sweltering tenants. To the "top floors,"—for these lofty-minded citizens scorn the idea of living in an attic—the old-fashioned roofs slope down to within a foot or two of the floor, and breathing is attended with such a sense of suffocation that one escapes as speedily as possible from the heated atmosphere only to meet a throng of half-clad children, whose appearance indicates a total ignorance of soap and water, but speaks more potently than words for the establishment of public baths. Could these much-desired boons be established in the First Ward with proper supervision, the physical aspect of that quarter would soon present visible signs of improvement, while the death-rate would decrease proportionately. Men, women and children would avail themselves of the beneficent influence of an invigorating bath, and with the advent of cleanliness of person, might also accrue tidiness of apartments, the consequent comfort of fathers who now spend much of their time away from the family, and the entire result be one of happiness, to which many of the poor are now total strangers.

DR. PRIESTLEY READMITTED.

A Vote of 14 to 9 in His Favor at a Special Meeting of the Monongahela Presbytery—An Appeal Taken.

From the Pittsburg (Penn.) Gazette, July 4.

The principal theme of conversation yesterday in Presbyterian circles was the decision in the case of James Presley, who recently made application to be reinstated in his church membership. The matter came up at a meeting of the Monongahela Presbytery last week, and yesterday was specially set apart for its consideration. At the appointed hour there was an average attendance of the members of the Presbytery, and visitors—the session being free to all—in the Hebron Presbyterian Church, a short distance beyond Wilkinsburg. Rev. S. B. Reed acted as moderator, and after the usual devotional exercises and several minor matters of business had been attended to, the special subject before the Presbytery was called up. The petition of Dr. Presley as published in the Gazette was read, after which speeches in support of it were made by Rev. Messrs. Ormond and Hutchinson, who contended that Dr. Presley having confessed his errors, had done all that human or Divine law required. They were followed by the petitioner, Dr. Presley, who made a very earnest and affecting address, which created considerable sympathy, and in a large measure helped his cause. He dwelt at some length upon the causes which had led to his excommunication from the Church, (our readers are familiar with the history,) and expressed his sorrow therefor and his great desire and anxiety to be restored to communion. Rev. Dr. W. J. Reid and Rev. Dr. John G. Brown addressed the Presbytery in opposition to granting the prayer, on the ground that as the excommunicated brother had been convicted and expelled upon specific charges, that his confession should not be—as it was—general in its character, but should be equally specific, to indicate his sincere and hearty repentance. The fact of his divorce from his first wife and marriage to a second was also incidently referred to and that would not permit them to ignominiously perish, as now seems likely, would be as singular as unfortunate."

SUNDAY PROCESSIONS.

Trial of Six Police Captains for Allowing Music—The Evidence and Defense—"Don't Do It Again."

Six Police Captains were yesterday placed on trial before Commissioners Manierre and Bosworth, on the charge of allowing processions, accompanied by music, to pass through their precincts on Sunday, June 23, in violation of the State Law and the General Orders, No. 36, of the Police Department. The Roman Catholic Church of St. John the Baptist was to be dedicated on that day, and a few days before, Valentine Fink, the Grand Marshal, made an application to the Board of Police, through the Clerk to the Superintendent, for the necessary permits. The Marshal said that he told the Clerk about the music, but the application, which had been filled upon a blank, said nothing about music; therefore the procession was allowed to march, but no permission for music was granted. The procession marched on the day indicated, and in six precincts, namely, the Eighth, Eleventh, Fifteenth, Seventeenth, Twentieth and Twenty-second, music was played, but was finally stopped by Capt. Burden, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct. Complaints having been made of the alleged latitude of the police on this particular occasion, Superintendent Kelso, by orders from the Commissioners, preferred charges against Capts. McCullough, Murphy, Byrnes, Walsh, Killalea and Caffrey, and they were yesterday brought up for trial.

Capt. McCullough, of the Eighth, was first placed on the stand, although the complaint was a general one against all the Captains.

Superintendent Kelso testified that he had sent out a general alarm notifying the Captains that the church societies had received the necessary permission to parade, but that they would not be allowed to use music in the procession. The escort was to be furnished from the Twenty-ninth Precinct. He had been informed that the order with regard to the music had not been complied with.

Officer Bradley, of the Eighth Precinct, testified that the music was not played until the procession passed him on his post; the line had been formed on South Fifth-avenue, and went through Canal-street to Thompson-street; they had a band with them, but did not hear it as it passed him; when he heard the music he tried to overtake them, but could not; he had received orders from the Captain to arrest any band playing music on a Sunday, and report the facts; he was in Grand-street when they began to play, and the procession was half a block away; witness did not think it necessary to prevent the music after the procession had left his precinct; had made no report to the Captain.

Capt. McCullough, in defense, said he had been up all night, and laid down about 6 o'clock on Sunday morning; as the procession moved early he knew nothing whatever about the music being played until spoken to on the following day by Inspector Dilks and Superintendent Kelso.

Capt. Byrnes, of the Fifteenth Precinct, was next placed on the stand.

Officers Barry and Carpenter, of that precinct, testified that they saw the procession and heard the music. Officer Carpenter said he heard the music faintly and followed the sounds, but when he had got to the end of his post the procession was out of sight, and he consequently made no report.

Capt. Byrnes said he had retired to rest at four o'clock in the morning, and knew nothing of the music until spoken to about it at Police Head-quarters.

Capt. Murphy, of the Eleventh, was next charged.

Nicholas Hester, of No. 120 Fifth-street, testified that he was one of the members of the society that formed in Pitt-street, between Stanton and Houston streets; he saw the society form into line and heard the music.

Philip Loesch, the leader of the band, was called, but did not answer to his name.

Capt. Murphy said when he left the Station at ten o'clock in the morning he instructed Sergt. Miller to send two men out to prevent the band playing. He knew nothing Business was resumed in Wall-street at noon, today, after the Holiday of the Fourth. The Gold Room opened at 113⅛ ₱ cent., and most of the transactions of the day were at this figure. An export of $1,500,000, reported as probable by the various steamers sailing to-morrow, (Saturday,) imparted firmness to the market. Some of the Bankers also put up their rate of Exchange to 110 ₱ cent. for 60 days, London, but when the actual cash sales of first class Bills came to be canvassed, it was found that drawers who had business to close out for Saturday's mail, accepted 109⅛@109⅜ ₱ cent., and in some instances as cheap as 109⅛ ₱ cent., net. In the Money market the Brokers were readily at cheap rates, 4@5 ₱ cent. on call loan. A number of the Banks were in the Wall-street market at 5 ₱ cent. The Commission Brokers who are carrying over Stocks for their dealers, paid only 3@4 ₱ cent. for money by lending the use of their Stocks.

The Holiday rest appeared to have improved the demand for the Railroad and other Stocks at the Exchange Board. There was a strong demand for many of the New-York and Western Roads at gradually advancing prices, as compared with the earlier days of the week, and the same feeling extended to Pacific Mail and Western Telegraph. During the recent dullness the tendency at the Exchange was to increase the short interest in Stocks, and today, when the prices began to harden, it was developed that such Stocks as Lake Shore, North-west, Rock Island, &c., were scarce for Cash deliverv. No effort is made by the buyers, however, who are speculating upon the chances of a further Summer rise, to make deliveries at all difficult, and the only advantage they avail of is to have their Stocks carried over at nominal rates of Interest. The transfers of the Lake Shore close tomorrow for the first of August Dividend of 4 ₱ cent., and the friends of the Stock hope to make this Dividend clear in the market price of the Stock Ex Dividend before the first of August. The June traffic of the Road shows a gain of over $200,000 on the same month last year. There was a rise of 2 ₱ cent. on Erie Stock, as compared with Wednesday, chiefly on the London telegrams, which show advancing prices in that market.

In the Public Funds and in State and Railway Bonds the feeling was generally firm today. The old Western Railway Mortgages and some of the new undertakings are in demand for the reinvestment of July Dividends, while the Pacific Mortgages (Centrals and Unions) are in request for both home investment and for transmission to Europe. Of the 8 ₱ cent. (Currency) Real Estate Mortgage Bonds of the Missouri Pacific Road—the Mortgage being for $800,000 on St. Louis City property belonging to the Road and otherwise unincumbered—Messrs. Clark, Dodge & Co. have sold over $400,000 at 101 ₱ cent. Of the St. Paul and Milwaukee 7 ₱ cent. Gold Mortgage, Messrs. Morton, Bliss & Co. have sold this week about $500,000 at 95 ₱ cent.

At the close of the Hall of the Exchange at 4 o'clock this Afternoon the following quotations were made as compared with 2 o'clock Wednesday, when the Exchange was closed for the Holiday:

The decrease of about half a million Sterling in the Bullion of the Bank of England, noticed in the London telegrams today, is owing to the payment of the First of July Interest on the British Funds. All Dividends below £5 or involving the fractional part of £5 are paid in Coin, the smallest denomination of Bank of England Notes being £5.

Since the July Dividends, the Bankers of the Chesapeake and Ohio 6 ₱ cent. Gold Mortgage, Messrs. Fisk & Hatch, report a very liberal demand for the Bonds, and they say to us that it "now seems probable that the remainder of the loan will be taken before the completion of the Road in October."

The earnings of the Toledo, Peoria and Warsaw Railway Company for June, 1872, were $94,521 90; 1871, $86,589 82; increase, $7,662 08.

The trains were not running for six or seven days, owing to the bridges being washed away by a flood.

The Philadelphia Ledger, says the Journal of Commerce, is one of our valued exchanges, and its money article in particular is always well written, and is received in all parts of the world as very high authority. One secret of the value and consistency of this department of the Ledger is fully explained in the annexed paragraph, which we extract from a recent issue:

"This day, thirty-two years ago, the Ledger contained its first article under the head of 'The Money Market.' The same heading has been continued daily in each successive issue of the paper since, and the hand that penned that article furnishes this, and has steadily, and without intermission of a single day on which the paper was printed, furnished the matter under that particular heading."

The trustees of the Seamen's Bank for Savings have ordered that interest for the past six months be paid depositors on sums of $500 and under, at the rate of Six ₱ cent. per annum, and on sums exceeding $500, at the rate of Five ₱ cent. per annum, payable on and after Monday, the 15th inst.

The week's imports of foreign Dry Goods have been to the specie value of $1,519,238; amount marketed, $1,018,635.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

JULY INVESTMENTS.

The large sales of Northern Pacific 7-30 Gold Bonds show their popularity with investors, and we recommend them to the public because of their ABSOLUTE SAFETY, both as a first-class railroad security and a real estate mortgage on lands worth twice the amount of the proposed loan.

The Bonds have thirty years to run—payable, principal and interest, in gold—exempt from United States tax to the holder: are a first and only mortgage on the Road and its earnings, and upon 50,000,000 acres of land—mainly agricultural, timbered and mineral.

The Bonds are issued in denominations of $100 to $10,000 Coupon and Registered, and are sold at par and interest in currency.

The semi-annual interest on the Registered Bonds is paid with GOLD CHECKS, sent to the post-office address of the holder.

All marketable securities received in exchange.

☞ A SAFE INVESTMENT
FOR TRUST FUNDS.
THE MIDLAND PACIFIC RAILWAY
FIRST MORTGAGE SEVEN PER CENT.
GOLD BONDS.

This road is entirely completed and in full operation between the Missouri River and Lincoln, the capital of the State of Nebraska, and is earning more than all its expenses, including interest on its bonds, while its traffic is constantly and rapidly increasing. The line has been built wholly by stock subscriptions, and among its stockholders are some of the most successful railway supporters and financiers in the country. The cost of the road, with its Franchises, Real Estate, Equipments, Telegraph Lines, &c., has been $43 333 per mile, while the mortgage on it is but $18,333, making the Company's securities safe beyond contingency.

The Midland Pacific will connect with the Union Pacific on the west, and on the east with direct lines to the Atlantic Coast and all intermediate centres. Its location is therefore a most important and commanding one, it being the central link of a new trunk route, shortening the distance to the Pacific by 147 miles. As a local enterprise, the Midland Pacific is invaluable. It traverses a fertile tract of country, one of the finest agricultural regions in the Union, and is the main feeder of a rapidly-increasing population. We have examined personally this entire enterprise, and recognize its importance and value, and confidently recommend its Bonds to investors.

During the past few years we have negotiated a large number of railway loans, and there is not one of these roads whose property does not exceed in value, by 100 per cent. the amount of its first mortgage bonds. Present price of Midland Pacifics, 90 and accrued interest. Bonds may be registered without charge, and all marketable securities taken in exchange at full rates.

☞ ST. JOSEPH AND DENVER CITY RAILROAD COMPANY'S FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS

Are being absorbed by an increasing demand for them.

Besides being the obligation of a wealthy corporation, composed of men of experience and high-toned commercial integrity, they are secured by a first mortgage on the road, revenues, land grant, franchise and equipments, combined in one mortgage, and are readily negotiable both in the markets of this country and Europe.

A liberal sinking fund provided in the mortgage deed must advance the price upon the closing of the loan. Principal and interest payable in GOLD. Interest at eight (8 p. c.) per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, free of tax. Principal in thirty years. Denominations, $1,000, $500 and $100, Coupons or Registered.

Price 97½ and accrued interest in currency, from Feb. 15, 1872.

Maps, circulars, documents and information furnished.

Trustees—Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of New York.

The diminished quantity of these Bonds for sale, and the increased demand absorbing them, warrant the belief that they will soon be sought for at an advance considerably above the present subscription price at which they can now be had through the principal banks and bankers throughout the country, and from the undersigned, who unhesitatingly recommend them.

GOLD LOAN
OF THE
MILWAUKEE AND ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY.

Messrs. MORTON, BLISS & CO., No. 30 Broad-st., New-York, are receiving subscriptions for the unsold balance of the $2,000,000 of these Bonds at 95.

One half of the Loan (£400,000) in sterling Bonds have been sold for European account.

This is the only gold loan issued by the Company.

The Share Capital of the Company is $21,148,600.

The Net Earnings of the Road for several years past have averaged more than seven per cent. per annum upon both classes of Stock. For the last three years the net earnings have averaged $1,604,429 33 over expenses and interest upon its entire bonded debt.

The Company owns 1,151 miles of railroad, with a bonded debt, including this loan, averaging $19,227 per mile.

☞ THE GREAT MIDLAND RAILROAD
NOW NEARLY COMPLETED.

The remainder of the FIRST MORTGAGE SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD BONDS, limited to $20,000 TO THE MILE on finished Road, offered, to close out the loan, at par and interest.

The New-Jersey Division of the Road is finished, and trains are now running into Jersey City. From Oswego eastward the road is in successful operation for a long distance. A short gap in the construction of the New-York Division alone prevents running through from New-York to Oswego. Work is progressing on this unfinished section with the utmost energy, and we hope soon to announce the completion of the entire road of this great Trunk Line from New-York to Oswego.

These Bonds, in our judgment, possess in a marked degree the elements of

Our desire is to place before the public the latest and most trustworthy information, and we have made ample arrangements for that purpose.*

The deaths in New-York for the week have, so far, reached the total of 1,348. Should the average daily mortality be sustained to-morrow the total number of deaths for the week will touch the almost unprecedented total of 1,572. How appalling a death-rate this represents may be understood from the fact that it is equal to 84.3 per 1,000 per annum—a rate which, if maintained, would leave New-York a desert at no very remote period. It is just four times the average rate of a moderately healthy European city. It is unnecessary to add that a very large portion of the increase is accounted for by the fearful mortality among children.

One CHAMBERLAIN is the reputed father of the "Labor Reform" movement which placed DAVIS and PARKER in the field for the Presidential canvass. His candidates having prudently declined to lead where there were so few to follow, he is now figuring for some new and more complaisant victims. He is probably the most thorough demagogue of all who make "labor reform" a profession; and it is on men of his class the responsibility rests for the miserable experience of the working men in striking in this City last month.

The Brooklyn Eagle fails to see what it calls "the relevancy of an indictment against a Governor, then a Mayor, for not committing fraud." This remark is based upon the second part of our indictment against Mayor HOFFMAN, viz., that he turned his back for the purpose of allowing Alderman COMAN to sign warrants which he was too "respectable" to put his own signature to. Would the Eagle see the relevancy of an indictment against the guardian of a clothing-store who should open the doors at midnight to a gang of thieves, but should decline participation in their operations with the remark, "Gentlemen, this is not in my line, but take as much as you have a mind to!" Meanwhile, will the Eagle publish our charges of direct participation in fraud by Mayor HOFFMAN?

The Americus Club is already "discounting" the triumph of the Greeley Ticket. The head-quarters of the Club are to be opened to-day with all their lavish display of magnificence, as costly as it is vulgar. Would it pay to allow these harpies to get their hands into the National Treasury, so as to permit their coarse pleasures and sensual pictures to be paid for by the general body of tax-payers? The citizens of New-York retain the proud consciousness of having been graciously allowed to house their rowdy rulers like princes. They are tired of supporting the Americus Club, and those who like it can undertake the job and welcome.

The present peculiar attitude of the French Executive toward the Assembly can be more readily understood when it is remembered that the present constituent body, though nominally "national," is not really representative of the people. All the recent elections have shown that an appeal to the country would result in the return of a body much stronger in Republican members than the existing one. It is the consciousness of this fact which makes M. THIERS very prompt to defy the Assembly, and which makes the Assembly very little disposed to run the risk of terminating their own and M. THIERS' official life at the same moment.

"GOV. HOFFMAN and his family are at Newport," says the Greeley organ, but not one word does it add about the shameful nature of this "loitering" on the part of the Executive of the Empire State. It is equally silent on the Governor's "nepotism" in appointing his father-in-law to a very fat office, as well as on His Excellency's "manipulation" of his high office to secure a renomination "by a corrupt bargain with the Cincinnati party."

A call will be found in our columns this morning for a Soldiers' and Sailors' Convention on the 17th of September next, in this City, to express the convictions of the veterans of the war in favor of GRANT and WILSON. The call is signed by a number of officers, who chanced to meet at the Philadelphia Convention in June, among whom are Gens. BURNSIDE, WAGNER, HAWLEY, FAIRCHILD, NEGLEY, MCCOOK, OGLESBY, BARLOW and NOYES.

Lyman Trumbull.

After the late "Liberal" Convention in Illinois had been swallowed by the Democratic Convention, Mr. TRUMBULL, addressing the crowd, according to the report, thus uttered himself: "Nothing is left of the Republican Party except the organization, which has fallen into the hands of men who seek to prostitute the party to their own selfish ends." These words are like Mr. TRUMBULL; they are words of self-righteousness, and imputation upon others. For months he has repeated countless times, "I am holier than thou." Through his many varying phases this idea constantly runs. He is a chronic impugner of the motives of leading men in the party he has deserted. Surely, therefore, he is a proper subject for consideration. Whenever a man tenders himself as a witness against others, his own character, credibility and motives are put in issue. If he be himself guilty of the sins he lays at the doors of others, if he be malevolent in his motives, if he have personal ends and interests in view, his testimony deserves little consideration. Mr. TRUMBULL deals in a group of accusations, and these he levels at the President, his fellow-Senators, and at all who bear up the Republican banner. He charges disregard of law; he stigmatizes appointments of relatives to office; he denounces as a crime permitting personal or party considerations to influence official patronage; he rails at selfishness in public men;—he thus holds himself out as guiltless in all these things, and he seeks to injure others by his accusations.

We propose to examine the claims of Mr. TRUMBULL to this right of censorship. A few facts in his career will reveal the value of his testimony.

He has been a constant office-holder and office-seeker for nearly thirty years. He is an office-holder now, and yet he gives much time (sometimes leaving his seat in the Senate for the purpose) to managing and intriguing in politics, all the while loudly denouncing office-holders for mingling in politics. He climbed into the United States Senate over the Constitution of his State. The Constitution of Illinois declares, "The Judges of the Supreme and Circuit Courts shall not be eligible to any other office or public trust of profit in this State, or the United States, during the term for which they were elected, nor for one year thereafter. All votes for either of them, for any elective office, except that of Judge of the Supreme or Circuit Courts, given by the General Assembly, shall be void."

Mr. TRUMBULL was elected Judge June 7, 1852, and entered upon the office, and his term continued till June 27, 1861; yet, ineligible as he was, by efforts of his own and of his friends he procured a majority of votes in the Legislature to be cast for him, during this judicial term, and then he overrode the Constitution of his State by gaining admission to the Senate. Money was used in his behalf to carry the election of legislators whose votes elected him to the Senate, particularly in one well-established instance, and, unless belied by those who know him best, scruples about means to party ends are not among his weaknesses. His brother-in-law, WILLIAM JAYNE, was elected, or counted into the Legislature of Illinois in 1861, not without the use of money, raised in part by appeals on behalf of Mr. TRUMBULL, in other States; and Mr. JAYNE'S vote gave the Republicans a majority of one in the Illinois Senate. Mr. JAYNE'S vote gave the election to Mr. TRUMBULL.

Soon after Mr. JAYNE cast his vote for Mr. TRUMBULL, and when Mr. JAYNE'S legislative term was only begun, Mr. TRUMBULL applied to President LINCOLN to appoint Mr. JAYNE Governor of a Territory. Mr. LINCOLN remonstrated, saying that to take Mr. JAYNE from his place in the Legislature of Illinois would leave the body to which he belonged without a Republican majority, which, in view of measures essential to carrying on the war, might lead to great public injury. Mr. TRUMBULL was impervious to Mr. LINCOLN'S objections, and succeeded in carrying his point, and his brother-in-law was appointed Governor of Dakota.

By this act, as Mr. LINCOLN foresaw, the Republicans lost control of the Legislature of Illinois. And here, though out of the order of events, another fact may be stated, connected with this same brother-in-law. The Pension Agency, at Springfield, Ill., was given by President GRANT to Gen. BLOOMFIELD, a Union soldier, who earned his promotion and lost a limb in the war. Presently Mr. TRUMBULL coveted the place for his brother-in-law, JAYNE, and applied to the President for it. President GRANT told him of BLOOMFIELD'S services and sufferings and bravery as a soldier. He reminded him that BLOOMFIELD was an unexceptionable officer, that he was an ardent Republican withal, at the same time saying that if any trust was appropriate to a wounded soldier, it was the business of paying to other wounded soldiers their pensions; and he appealed to Mr. TRUMBULL not to ask him to turn out such a man, merely because the position was asked for another. Mr. TRUMBULL met these suggestions with importunate solicitations that the place should be given to his brother-in-law, and in the end the President yielded, and BLOOMFIELD was turned out, and JAYNE put in. Turning out and putting in men from favor is a new aversion of Mr. TRUMBULL; preferring relatives is only lately a sin in his eyes.

After many requests had been complied with, by "taking care of his friends," Mr. TRUMBULL applied to President GRANT to appoint his son Collector of Internal Revenue for the Territory of Montana. The character and career of the young man were such as to render the appointment unfit and unsafe. The President, in several interviews, excused himself to Mr. TRUMBULL from making the appointment, and at length, when the request was again repeated, positively declined. Here occurred one of the only two instances in which President GRANT has been subjected to menace by those seeking patronage. Senator TRUMBULL betook himself to violent language and gestures, declaring to the President that "he'd see, before he had done, whether his son could be appointed or not."

Mr. TRUMBULL'S propensity for family politics is not without other illustrations. For years past, a son, and in his absence another near relative, has been at all times kept in the clerkship of the Judiciary Committee, Mr. TRUMBULL being Chairman and controlling the appointment. Mr. BROWN, a very intimate friend and ally of Mr. TRUMBULL, was brought by him from Illinois, and made Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate. Mr. TRUMBULL, by efforts often noticeable for their intensity and excess, maintained in place this "henchman," as Mr. GRIMES once styled him in the Senate. The relationships between Mr. TRUMBULL and Mr. BROWN, taken in connection with various transactions to which both were privy, present a case far outrunning all ordinary instances of getting a friend an office, or of being served by a friend in office.

Those who know the history of house-building by the late Sergeant-at-Arms, and who have heard a reckoning of the collection of books found, on his removal, stored away in the caverns of the Capitol, and who have also heard how these vast piles of documents were suddenly protected by a Senator's label, will appreciate in part these reminiscences.

An interest in obtaining places is not the only interest Mr. TRUMBULL has evinced in the welfare of relatives. The award of contracts at a Department, where a relative was a bidder, has not always been left to go without the supervision of the Senator. Few men have been more frequent or urgent in demands upon the appointing power. Apart from personal applications and requests, Mr. TRUMBULL stands recorded upward of one hundred times, after Gen. GRANT came in, requesting or suggesting appointments. Sometimes he appears by letter, saying, "I very much desire that —— should be appointed Governor of Wyoming, and if not of Wyoming, of some other Territory." Or, he concludes an application by saying, "There are also two or three persons whose appointment as Cousuls would be very gratifying to me." These requests were largely granted, and Mr. TRUMBULL was never found assailing office-getting, or office-giving, or "nepotism," until his own demands grew too great to be complied with.

When the President refused to appoint his son, gratitude changed from a sense of the many favors done to a lively sense of benefits to come from new alliances. The very acts of the President now most bitterly denounced had Mr. TRUMBULL'S full assent. So the acts of Congress which he now assails received his vote. When Mr. STEWART was nominated Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. TRUMBULL voted to confirm him, and when the law was found in Mr. STEWART'S way, Mr. TRUMBULL saw a mode of getting round it.

When the acts of Congress now denounced as despotic and centralizing were passed, Mr. TRUMBULL urged and voted for them—and for the strongest of them. All this, however, was before his vote upon the impeachment of ANDREW JOHNSON, and other acts, had destroyed his prospect of obtaining another Senatorial term from the Republicans of Illinois.

Discredited with his party in his own State, and having obtained from the Administration of President GRANT all that could be reached, Mr. TRUMBULL turned to new combinations, in the hope, first, of a nomination for the Presidency by the "Outs," to be accepted by the Democrats; and, failing in this, in the hope of getting back to the Senate, by combining the support of all the enemies of the Administration. Disappointed at Cincinnati, he is earning the favor of the disaffected, the disappointed, the mercenary, and at the same time of the Democratic Party, by turning his back upon the professions of years. Reversing position suddenly is nothing new with Mr. TRUMBULL. Politics are not the only field in which short and profitable turns mark his path. Here is an instance: The Illinois Central Railroad received vast grants from the United States. One of the conditions of these grants was that in time of war troops and munitions should be carried for the Government free of charge. During the rebellion, in the din and crush of the occasion, the War Department, without reference to this condition, allowed the railroad freights exceeding two million dollars. When time was found to take breath, attention was called to the claim for this great sum, for services which the law exacted in return for the grant, and a bill was introduced into the House of Representatives to save this money to the Government.

Mr. WASHBURN, of Illinois, a warm friend of President GRANT, was a warm supporter of the bill. Other members from Illinois also supported it. Senator TRUMBULL was quoted for it, when it should reach the Senate, and it threatened to give the railroad serious trouble. Representatives of the imperiled corporation flocked to the rescue, and suddenly Senator TRUMBULL appeared as the most active and busy opponent of the bill. He haunted the House of Representatives, to point out to members the wrong and injustice of such a measure. After a persistent struggle, the bill was defeated, and then came a curious coincidence. Senator TRUMBULL was credited with defeating the bill, and forthwith GEORGE TRUMBULL, the brother and law partner of the Senator, was made General Attorney for the Illinois Central Railroad, at an annual salary of ten or twelve thousand dollars a year. GEORGE TRUMBULL was notoriously inadequate to such a place, and the man put out to make room for him was distinguished for his capacity and faithfulness. This gentleman, thus suddenly displaced, applied to the President of the road for an explanation, asking if any fault was found with him. The answer was, in substance, "No fault with you; far from it. It was necessary to give the place to Mr. TRUMBULL. No explanation can be made. Things are sometimes necessary which cannot be explained." The deposed attorney was immediately informed that he was still relied upon to do the work, and was requested to continue it, charging for his professional services as he would charge clients in general; and he did continue, the law partner and brother of the Senator receiving the salary, but the man he superseded furnishing the brain and the service required. Another affair shows the Senator an adept at turning a professional penny with legislative opportunity. The case of MCCARDLE is here referred to. MCCARDLE was arrested and detained under the Reconstruction acts, for stirring up turbulence in the late rebel States. He sued out a writ of habeas corpus from the United States Circuit Court of Mississippi, and, after hearing, was remanded to imprisonment by the Court. He claimed the right of appeal to the Supreme Court, and the impression prevailed that several of the Supreme Judges (the Bench being then not full) were biased against the Reconstruction acts.

Excited as the times then were, much apprehension prevailed of the ill effects of a decision disturbing existing legislation, and the right of appeal being questionable, it was thought wise by some to settle the matter at once by act of Congress.

It was proposed to declare by law that in such cases jurisdiction should be confined to the Circuit and District Courts of the United States. This Senator TRUMBULL strenuously resisted, on the ground that no appeal or writ of error to the Supreme Court lay in such a case. This position, he insisted, could be surely maintained before the Court itself. On the other hand, it was urged by Senators that, if such were the law already, no harm could come from so declaring it; that at that stage of the proceeding there was no unfairness or impropriety in legislating upon it, and that if the Court should assert its jurisdiction, to legislate afterward might be open to grave objection. Senator TRUMBULL resisted all proposals of legislative action with noticeable pertinacity, and, being Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, was a hon in the path.

In the absence of legislation, the case proceeded. Mr. STANTON consulted two Senators, neither of whom was Senator TRUMBULL, as to the propriety of their appearing in the case as counsel. These Senators found, in the act of Congress forbidding Senators to make any contract with the Government, for services or otherwise, and also in the possible need of legislation in regard to the matter, insuperable objections to their accepting employment in the case. It turned out, however, that Senator TRUMBULL was employed as counsel. He presently went into Court, in December, 1867, and moved to dismiss the appeal for want of jurisdiction, stating the grounds previously insisted on in his conversations with Senators. The Court, at the same time, denied the motion, and decided that it had jurisdiction. On the 2d, 3d, 4th and 9th of the following March (1868) the case was argued on its merits, Mr. CARPENTER (not then Senator) acting as chief counsel, but Mr. TRUMBULL also taking part. The Court held the case under advisement, and the impression went abroad that the decision would be in MCCARDLE'S favor. Thereupon, and within two days, an amendment ousting the Court of jurisdiction was moved in the House to a bill enlarging the jurisdiction of the Court in revenue cases. It passed without observation, went to the Senate, and passed there with less than five minutes' discussion on the 12th of March, three days after the argument in the Court. Senator TRUMBULL voted for it on the yeas and nays. The bill was vetoed on account of this provision, its object having meanwhile become known to all, and on the 25th of March the veto message was taken up in the Senate. Senator TRUMBULL urged immediate consideration, unless all would agree to a final vote the next day. An agreement was accordingly made to vote the next day at 6 o'clock, when, upon the yeas and nays, Mr. TRUMBULL voted to pass the bill over the veto, and it did pass. By whom this amendment was prepared, who carried it to the House, who claimed credit for controlling and fixing the whole affair, cannot be learned from the record; but Mr. SCHENCK, now Minister to Great Britain, Mr. JAMES F. WILSON, of Iowa, and several others, members of Congress then, could tell. Some of them have told.

For his services Senator TRUMBULL charged and obtained $10,000 from the Treasury, apart from his pay as Senator, the bill being presented in his own handwriting.

One thousand dollars was paid him on the 7th of March, 1868, two thousand dollars on the 6th of April, 1868, and seven thousand on the 23d of April, 1868. At the time of this employment, and at the time of each of these payments, an impeachment of ANDREW JOHNSON was pending, and on the 26th of May, 1868, one month and three days after the last payment, Senator TRUMBULL, differing with the great body of his party, voted to acquit ANDREW JOHNSON. A mind and a heart less malevolent than his might add to the undeniable ugliness of these transactions an unpleasant association of dates. Senator TRUMBULL sought to becloud his predicament by stating in the Senate recently that the formal retainer received the signature of Gen GRANT, temporarily acting Secretary of War, and by leaving it to be inferred that Gen. GRANT or Mr. STANTON, and not ANDREW JOHNSON, really gave him this money-making opportunity. Obviously Gen. GRANT, obeying the order of the President, and setting for a few days as locum tenens of the War Department while Mr. STANTON was dispossessed, was not the author or originator of Mr. TRUMBULL'S selection as counsel. Mr. STANTON'S known bad opinion of Mr. TRUMBULL, and the hostility of Mr. TRUMBULL to Mr. STANTON, leave no reason to believe that Mr. STANTON, who consulted with other Senators as to their being employed and concurred in its impropriety, at the same time asked Mr. TRUMBULL to disregard proprieties binding all Senators alike. An incident may here be mentioned bearing on the probability of Mr. STANTON'S having selected Senator TRUMBULL as the recipient of such a favor. Only the year after the events we are relating, every Senator to whom it was presented save one signed a letter warmly commending Mr. STANTON to the President for Justice of the Supreme Court. Senator TRUMBULL alone refused his signature; and when Mr. STANTON was told of those who signed and of him who refused, he declared that he felt as well certified by the refusal of the one as he did by the signatures of the rest.

Here we leave for the present this accuser of other men.

Mr. Greeley's Epitaph.

The "Sage of Chappaqua" must have been in a despondent humor when he made his little speech to the members of the Press at Boston on Wednesday. He had evidently abandoned all hopes of being elected President, since he told his hearers that "his pastime had been associated through life with such as they, and with such as they it would continue to be associated to the end"—a contingency that is hardly probable in case of the success of the Cincinnati ticket—unless, indeed, the "Sage" proposes to make up his Cabinet and carry on his Administration exclusively with journalists, in which case DANA, of the Sewer, who is his oldest newspaper associate, would, of course, be given the first place. We trust Uncle HORACE does not design to withdraw from the canvass, at least not till after the Baltimore Convention, bad as is the outlook, for in that event half of the fun of the campaign will be spoiled. But when a man's mind begins to dwell upon his epitaph, and he manifests an anxiety to write it out and read it in advance, his friends naturally conclude that life has lost its attractions for him, and that he is getting ready to make his exit. Mr. GREELEY is reported as concluding his speech to the Press correspondents as follows:

"If the world shall say of me, in the end, 'he was a good printer, a respectable publisher, and an honest editor,' all my ambition will be satisfied."

Glad as the world would doubtless be to gratify a despending candidate for the Presidency who professes such moderate ambition, we are sorely afraid that Mr. GREELEY has lived a few years too many to elicit from posterity the verdict he desires. Had he died some fifteen years ago, or just before he wrote his famous letter dissolving the "firm of SEWARD, WEED and GREELEY," his countrymen might, perhaps, have been willing to inscribe the above epitaph upon his tombstone. But that letter entirely changed the popular estimate of his character. It revealed him in the light of a man who was not content with being a "good printer, a respectable publisher and an honest editor," but who had an insatiable itching for public office—an itching which he was willing to make any sacrifice, of friendship or principle, to gratify. Up to that time Mr. GREELEY had carefully concealed this object of his ambition, not only from the readers of his paper, but from his political friends and partners; since that time it has been his ruling passion, displayed on all occasions and at all times, and known of all men. It has led him into all sorts of inconsistencies and contradictions, and has involved him in the most unnatural and corrupt alliances. As he has grown older, the passion has grown stronger, until it has finally reached a point where we find him ready to go back on the record of his whole past life, to eat his own words, daily and vehemently expressed during a period of forty years, to betray the party which he boasts of having created, and to beg votes at the hands of his enemies, whom he has vilified and traduced in every conceivable form for a quarter of a century.

This is the attitude in which he now stands before the public, and, unless he mends his ways, the world will say of him "in the end," if it says anything, substantially as follows:

"Here was a man who might have been, and was at one time, a good printer, a respectable publisher, and an honest editor, but whose excessive vanity, love of notoriety, and craving for public office, (for which he was totally unfitted,) betrayed him, in the latter part of his life, into the most extraordinary course of conduct, and made him an object of pity with his friends, a butt for his enemies, and the laughing-stock of a whole nation."

Family Jars.

The wretched domestic quarrel that occurred the other day in New-Orleans has received extraordinary publicity, and it would be strange if it had not. Simply as a piece of current intelligence, the newspapers throughout the country have published the opening steps of this dismal quarrel, which has now passed into a fresh phase even more remarkable than the first. It is but just to say, since the course of Mrs. BRONSON-HOLBROOK has been so widely and so justly condemned, that if what is alleged in her petition, now before us, to the Judge of the District Court can be proved, she must be allowed to have had bitter provocation. Nothing, of course, could warrant her behavior; but in all charity we must admit there was something to excuse it. She is accused of having assaulted the lady now recognized by Mr. HOLBROOK as his wife, and to have tried to kill her. After inflicting some bad, but not dangerous wounds, she proceeded to smash the furniture of the house with an ax. She thus did damage to the extent of thousands of dollars. Her arrest followed, and she was committed to prison. Subsequently she was released on bail, and has now brought suit for divorce against Mr. HOLBROOK, who, on the other hand, claims to have been already divorced from her.

The order made by the Judge of the District Court on her petition shows that he thinks she has at least a tenable case. Judge LEAUMONT directs that Mrs. BRONSON-HOLBROOK shall be allowed to bring and prosecute the suit; that she shall be authorized to live in the house in Constance-street, the scene of her late extraordinary proceeding; that she shall be allowed alimony pendente lite, and her husband shall be enjoined from disposing of the community property existing between them, and that an inventory and appraisal shall be effected of the same. This order by no means necessarily affects the ultimate disposition of the case; but it certainly warrants the supposition that the business is not quite so one-sided as at first it appeared. But further curious facts are now made public. Mrs. BRONSON-HOLBROOK'S petition prays that the decree of divorce granted Mr. HOLBROOK shall be declared null and void. Thus she recognizes the existence of such a decree, which, of course, is a technical justification of the present marital relation of Mr. HOLBROOK and the lady last recognized as his wife. Now, Judge LEAUMONT makes his order in distinct view of the disclosure in Mrs. BRONSON-HOLBROOK'S petition of the existence of this decree. The ground for his proceeding is plain and simple, but is likely to lead to puzzling complications. The petitioner alleges that she never had lawful notice of the suit for divorce instituted, and pleads this in support of her action of nullity, and on the strength of this the Judge made his order.

The singular feature about the case as it stands is that, supposing the disputed decree to be maintained, the strange spectacle will be presented of a woman suing for a divorce from a man who is not her husband, and compelling him meanwhile not only to give up his house to her use, but to supply her with money to live comfortably in it during the action. This seems hard, but Mrs. BRONSON-HOLBROOK'S plea against the validity of the decree, if true, is sound. She alleges that she was in the North, on a visit, when the decree was procured, that it was procured without her knowledge, and that on her return to her house in Constance-street she found a young lady, who been accustomed to visit at the house, living there without her permission. This is the lady now acknowledged by Mr. HOLBROOK as his wife, and the one upon whom the assault was made as described. We do not dwell upon the many allegations of ill-treatment made against Mr. HOLBROOK by his original partner, or of her charges that he has alienated property common to both. These are matters to be established or confuted by evidence, and pending its production need not be discussed. It is right, however, to give publicity to the fact that Mrs. BRONSON-HOLBROOK contests the decree of divorce, and that the Judge seems to hold that she has grounds to go upon in so doing.

Our arrangements for the first picnic are nearly completed. It is proposed to take at least four hundred children from the Five Points to Rockaway Beach, under the care of Mr. BARNARD, the Superintendent of the House of Industry, assisted by the teachers. Several of the mothers of these children will also be taken along, and an excellent luncheon provided for all. A force of policemen will also accompany the picnic party. The children will be given full liberty for play and games, and they will sing their school songs and glees. We may be able to take some music, which will add to the pleasures of the day. Now that the picnic movement has been fairly entered upon, we trust the public will respond liberally in order that the seven excursions already projected may be successfully carried out.

It turns out that the "insult to the American flag," offered by the Dominion authorities, in the case of the James Bliss, of which the New-York Blatherskite made such elaborate use, was the result of a mistake on the part of a subordinate officer. This is now known on the authority of the commander of the schooner, who believes it was the duty of the authorities to seize his vessel, and who declares he was very kindly treated throughout.

The list of fatal casualties at Coney Island Beach is now opened, and will be indefinitely extended during the season. On the 4th a young swimmer got beyond his depth, and was drowned. Nothing could be done to aid him, for the preparations for such occurrences are mere delusions, calculated to give a false sense of security, but singularly inadequate for a sudden emergency. If bathers at Coney Island cannot arrange to inform the proprietors of the bath-houses a few hours in advance of any accident about to occur, they had better stay away. Under no other circumstances can they expect to be properly cared for.

The clever writer who acts the part of Courier de Paris to the admirable Journal Universel of Paris, has some pertinent notes on the Grand Prix. After giving vent to the sentiment—"If we had only experienced such defeat as this!"—apropos of the English horse winning—he proceeds to review the concomitants of racing, and following the bent of French opinion, points out that the gambling effects of horse-racing are just as bad as those at the table. M. AUDEBRAND, after instancing the enormous losses of racing men, refers to the fact that the groom bets in proportion to his means as much as his master—a fact to which the suicide of Lord ZETLAND'S footman, on account of turf losses, gives point. In conclusion, he states that a tremendous row took place at Mabille on the evening of the Grand Prix, when there was a general smash of mirrors, furniture, and goblets, ending by the jeunesse dorée of France and England being forcibly ejected. "And this all through a couple of horses!"

A few months ago a famous Prussian General was inspecting some military stables. "What do I see there?" he said, in tones of thunder, to a Sergeant. "Cobwebs?" "Yes, Sir," was the respectful reply, "we keep them there to catch the flies and prevent their teasing the horses." Let us go and do likewise. Let every house-maid be instructed to let alone the cobwebs—indeed, many of our Hibernian "helps" need very little instruction on this head—and to regard the spider as a beneficent friend to man and devourer of his Summer foe.

The opening of Church-street, between Fulton-street and the Battery, was sufficiently completed nine months ago to admit of putting down a decent pavement. Yet there has been no attempt made to have this very necessary work done from that time up to the present. The street has been gradually getting more and more impassable, until it is now so full of deep holes as to render traffic in it especially dangerous after dark. So far, the value of the improvement cannot be fairly estimated, owing to the carmen's disinclination to run the risk of breaking springs and laming their horses for the sake of making a short-cut to save five or ten minutes. Commissioner VAN NORT might find useful employment for one of his Inspectors in preparing a report on the actual condition of this Church-street extension, with the view of having it paved without further delay.

MISSISSIPPI.

The Democratic Convention and its Leading Spirits—The Delegates to Baltimore—The Canvass.

From Our Own Correspondent.

JACKSON, Miss., Friday, June 28, 1872.

The so-called Democratic Conservative State Convention adjourned yesterday evening at 6 o'clock, after a turbulent session of about seven hours. Only forty out of seventy counties were "represented" at all, and a large part of them by self-constituted "delegates." The controlling spirits present were McCardle, alias McArdle, of the McCardle case, whose notoriety, like that of Dred. Scott, is purely adventitious, and Lewis, Barksdale, Frantz and Horne, editors of obscene Democratic newspapers. You will remember that in 1863, the Confederate States Congress was brained by the resignation of such men as Toombs, Wise and others, for the purpose of going into the army, and that thenceforth that body was contemptible in the eyes of the world for its want of both capacity and courage. Barksdale, and A. G. Brown, and J. W. C. Watson were among the remaining members who passed the Conscript law, forcing all the boys and old men who were not "Congressmen," or who did not own as many as fifteen slaves, to go into the army to fight the battles of slavery. The three last named, added to the editors aforesaid, had complete control of the Convention. One of the worthies I have named, Horne, is editor of the Mercury, a vile sheet issued at Meridian, a place that, one year ago, was the scene of the massacre of some twelve or fifteen colored men and women in cold blood. This man Horne is now under indictment for his crimes against the colored race. He was one of the leading spirits of the Convention. He is a leading Greeley man, and a delegate from the State at large to the Baltimore Convention. Of course Grant fared badly in such hands. If they could have got hold of him, all of them together and he alone, at any time within the last twelve hours, I am certain they would have effected a change in the Presidential office. As it was, they only accused him of all sort of personal infamy and villainy.

DELEGATES TO BALTIMORE.

The following list of delegates was selected:

Principals—J. W. C. Watson, of Marshall, a Confederate Congressman after it was brained; E. Barksdale, of Hinds, another of the same class, except that he has no ability except as a political trickster; J. H. Sharpe, of Lowndes, Confederate General and an amiable gentleman: A. G. Horne, of Lauderdale, K. K. editor, indicted under United States Enforcement act.

Alternates—W. S. Featherston, of Marshall, Ex-Congressman and Confederate General; S. S. Calhoon, of Madison, a young gentleman of ability and promise; H. M. Street, of Prentiss, Democratic member of State Legislature; George Wood, of Jackson County, unknown.

THE CANVASS.

The canvass in this State, so far as white votes are concerned, will turn mainly upon the question of liberality, or rather the question of illiberality, to the late rebels. Upon the one hand it is said that Grant has been and is exceedingly little, malignant and pusillanimous toward us, and that Greeley, though never generous or magnanimous to anybody, promises largely for the future. But there are many who claim that Grant is at least just, and ready to be magnanimous if the Southerners will only give him a fair opportunity. SOUTHRON.

The Alleged Insult to the Stars and Stripes—Letter from the Captain of the James Bliss.

QUEBEC, July 5.—The following letter from the master of the schooner James Bliss, is published:

To the Editor of the Morning Chronicle:

SIR: I have noticed in different papers remarks regarding an insult said to have been made against the United States flag by Commander Lachance, of the Dominion cutter Stella Marie, who seized the schooner James Bliss, of which I am master, for fishing within the prescribed limits. I acknowledge that laboring under the impression that the treaty was settled and all restrictions removed, I was found fishing in Canadian waters. In justice to Commander Lachance I must say that while performing what I suppose was his duty he has treated me kindly and like a gentleman. This treatment I have also received in Quebec from Mr. Gregory and Mr. Tilton, of the Department at Ottawa, whom I met at Mr. Gregory's office at Quebec. Regarding the turning down of the union part of the American flag when the Dominion flag was put at the mast-head, I firmly believe this was done through the mistake or simple ignorance of the second officer left in charge of the prize, Commander Lachance not being on board at the time

(Signed,) ALLAN MCISAAC,
Master of Schooner James Bliss.

THE EDGAR STEWART CASE.

The American Guard on the Steamer at Aspinwall—The Life of the Vice-Consul Threatened.

ALBANY, July 5.—The United States Consul at Aspinwall, now here on a visit, has received advices from the Vice-Consul to the effect that there is no change in the Edgar Stewart matter. Notwithstanding the positive order issued by the Governor of Panama, that the American force on board the Stewart should be removed as early as possible, the forces remain, and will continue to do so. Great efforts have been made by the Panama authorities to get control of the vessel, but the Vice-Consul stands firmly against these efforts. His life has been threatened, but he has notified the authorities that he will defend himself with arms against any attack made upon him.

Mr. PERRY, the Consul, will leave for his Consulate on the next steamer.

A NEW MOVE IN ERIE.

Mr. Vanderbilt to be President, with Full Power.

The New-York Central to be Consolidated with it.

The People at the Mercy of a Monopoly—The English Stockholders Control the Roads—The Commodore Said to Be their Choice.

The extraordinary and erratic fortunes of the Erie Railroad ever since it was first conceived by its originator have been equaled in the history of no other corporation in this country, or, indeed, in the world. It was a bold conception to tunnel through the mountains, build a way along the beetling cliffs, and stretch an iron track from the Metropolis of the New World direct to the waters of the lake from which the road derives its name. There were gigantic physical obstacles to be overcome before the work was completed, but the financial difficulties were even greater. There have been attacks on Erie by other roads, and Erie has herself often become the assailant. The road was built with the avowed intention of supplying a second route from the West to the Metropolis, and during evil and good report, whether paying or not, it has afforded a channel by which freight and passengers might pass at a cheap rate, and without being impoverished by the payment of the high prices imposed by a monopoly. The history of the coup d'etat of the 11th of last March is yet fresh in the minds of the people It will be remembered that after the death of Fisk a meeting was held by a Board of the Erie Directors to take measures for the ousting of Jay Gould from the Presidency of the corporation. English stockholders were at the bottom of this movement to dethrone Gould, and were assisted by Gen. Sickles and S. L. M. Barlow, together with George Couch. The movement was successful, and Gen. Dix was chosen President in place of Jay Gould, while Mr. W. W. Sherman was appointed Treasurer; and Mr. O. H. P. Archer, Vice-President. These latter gentlemen entered upon their duties as officers of the road, and were supported by the English stockholders, who immediately began to buy up the stock in the States, through their agents, and ship it to England. The stock rose rapidly, and fortunes were made and lost in Wall-street in a day. For a time, under various rumors and amid prevailing uncertainty, its value fluctuated rapidly, but lately it has been more settled. The English stockholders, since achieving their victory, have been casting about for expedients to give the stock a value which it has had recently only by reason of their extensive purchases. There has been one fact before them, viz.: The New-York Central Railroad being, the only opposition line, if it could swallow Erie, or Erie it, a monopoly would be formed controlling all the carrying business from the West to the Northern seaboard. A consolidation of New-York Central and Erie, however, was hardly to be thought of, for obvious reasons. But finally, it is reported, the stockholders have hit upon a solution of the difficulty, which was no less than to sack the present board of officers, and tender the Presidency of the road to Cornelius Vanderbilt. The question was discussed at a meeting of the English stockholders in London a fortnight ago, and as a consequence offers were made to Mr. Vanderbilt, the tenor of which is stated above. Mr. Vanderbilt is understood to have replied that he would accept the Presidency on condition of having absolute control, with power to do what he wished and thought needful for the welfare of the road. An agreement was thereupon entered into, that at the ensuing election, which will take place in a few days, Mr. Vanderbilt shall receive the votes of the English stockholders, which are now amply sufficient to control it, and that on the other hand, the road shall pass into his hands, and together with the New-York Central form a monopoly of the carrying trade from the West to New-York. The tariffs will be raised immediately after the election, and the Erie and New-York Central Roads run practically as one corporation. This arrangement has been entered into as no experiment, but as a permanent affair, and yesterday the agents of the English stockholders made further extensive purchases of stock in consequence of the acceptance by Commodore Vanderbilt of the presidency of the road, the price advancing three per cent. Commodore Vanderbilt will also make changes in every way of the regulations and appurtenances of the road. Today will be lively at the Stock Exchange.

AMUSEMENTS.

Musical.

THE BAND OF THE GRENADIER GUARDS.

The band of the English Grenadier Guards, under the direction of Mr. Dan Godfrey, gave at the Academy of Music, last evening, the only concert in which they are to take part previous to returning to London. Their departure for England will be effected today. It could hardly be attended with brighter memories than yesterday's incidents must have created. A larger audience could not have been packed into the Academy than filled it last night to bid the band an almost simultaneous welcome and farewell, and no vocal or instrumental performance could possibly elicit a more enthusiastic display of gratification than was shown from the interpretation of the first to that of the last number of the programme. No recital by a brass band could be more justly deserving of such honors than that of Mr. Godfrey's men. The perfection of the solos, in point of intonation, tone, beauty and eloquence of phrasing, and precision in the most rapid as in the slowest passages, was scarcely more productive of admiration than the faultless accompaniments supplied to them. In fact, the quality of this part of the band's work commended it most strongly to the critical listener. Crescendos and diminuendos, swelling and dying away in exquisite sympathy with the breathings of the prominent instrument, marvellous arpeggios, and rare effects wrought by the drums, were a few of the many niceties of the playing of the band which no doubt gave to persons of experience in such matters, the liveliest pleasure. The excellence of the accompaniments as support to the voices intrusted with the themes must have been apparent to every one. Mr. Godfrey's musicians proved by last evening's efforts that they could sustained with success a chorus of one hundred voices, or subdue their might to furnishing the bass for the warble of a bird. The impressiveness of their execution was equally clear. The bravo of the festal music in "Rigoletto" and "La Traviata," the airy lightness of "E scherzo" in "Il Ballo," the crispness of the dance tunes in "Il Profeta," the severe grandeur of the bars from the scene of the benediction of the swords in "Gli Ugonotti," and the fluent grace of "Ombra leggiera" in "Dinorah," were in turn illustrated with the same unvarying felicity. Though the solos were exceedingly fine, they could not but be of slight interest when compared with the results of the united endeavors of sixty men, informed with a common taste, and skilled as executants in the very highest degree. It would not be an easy task to select for mention a few of the selections of the concert as particularly worthy of praise. The overtures to "Der Freyschuetz," and to "Rob Roy"—the latter by Sir H. Bishop—two potpourris of operatic airs, a variety of national melodies, two of Mr. Godfrey's waltzes, and Frewin's "Excelsior Polka" formed the larger portion of the bill. The cornet solos were contributed by Mr. McGrath, who has firmness, purity, and vigor, and by Mr. Ellis. A clarionet solo—a series of variations, and a very tiresome one—was done by Mr. Spencer, whose tone is good, and whose surety is astonishing. Mr. Roe's management of the concertina, in "Recollections of Scotland," quite rehabilitated that contemned contrivance, and the same gentleman's use of the piccolo, in an after solo also disclosed unsuspected resources in the smaller flute. It only remains for us to say that all the pieces were redemanded, that "The Star Spangled Banner" and the British anthem were heard time and again amid an uproarious demonstration of delight, and that the entertainment was not terminated until a late hour.

A PRECIOUS LOT.

What is Going On at Greenwich—Is the American Club a Political Society?

The American Club intend opening their hotel at Indian Harbor today, when unlimited champagne and other costly liquors will no doubt be consumed. The fall of the Tammany Ring last year it was supposed destroyed the American Club with all the other Ring establishments, but it has recently gained new life. The American Club-house is just as handsomely fitted up today as in the days of the Ring, and there are quite as many Ring politicians connected with the Club. The "Stable Gang," a noted Sixth Ward organization, has an elaborately fitted up apartment, scarcely to be met with in the house of a millionaire. The President's and Vice-Presidents' bedroom floors are covered with tapestry carpets made expressly by European looms, supposed only to be employed in work for decorating royal mansions, and the furniture of these rooms and their parlor is of the most extravagant character. The pictures, although somewhat of a licentious style, are richly painted and more gorgeously framed, and the vases, bronzes and other ornaments are palatial in their style and extravagance. The Secretary's bed-chamber must have cost a fortune, as money has not been spared, it being rather lavish expenditure for a Police Court clerk. The band-master's room is not so extravagantly fitted up, but yet more money is here expended than would be deemed necessary in any ordinary sleeping-room. Other members' rooms are furnished in like manner, the peculiar taste of the occupant being shown in the pictures, lace-work, &c One bed was covered with a counterpane of blue silk and white lace, and another with a material equally as extravagant. In the main drawing-room the furniture is very elaborate, one table being made of several thousand pieces of inlaid work. The bronze ornaments are very costly, as also the frames of the pictures. The library is anything but well selected, being composed principally of sensational novels; but the immense supply of French glasses of all kinds proves that if the mental faculties are not cultivated, that of the appetite is not forgotten. The facilities for cooking are sufficient to furnish the table for hundreds with the most tempting delicacies. Buffets for wine and other liquors are not only profuse in the dining-room, but are also located in every member's bed-chamber. Conveniences are furnished for billiards, draw-poker, or anything else of this kind that might be desired. Extravagance everywhere.

"And who paid for all this?" would naturally be asked. "The members." It cannot be possible. Tens of thousands of dollars expended for fitting up single rooms, and some of the members own yachts that also cost thousands. And yet there is no evidence that any of the member's are in receipt of an honest income that could support so extravagant an outlay. Even the President of the United States would be accused of willfully wasting the people's money if he were to fit up even at his own expense the White House in the style that some of these rooms at the American Club-house are furnished. But not only has the place been thus equipped at a heavy cost, but the maintenance corps is also very large. All the Summer a hundred attendants at least have to be always on hand, for there is no knowing on what day a crowd of members and guests may arrive, and it is not always easy to hire extra help. A corps of boat and yacht hands have to keep up, so that the members may go out for a row or sail when they please. All this is kept up by dues and initiations. But who can afford to pay them? Five hundred dollars for initiation, two hundred dollars a year for dues, thousands of dollars for fitting up a room, and thousands for a yacht; besides assessments for every conceivable kind of thing that may be suggested in the shape of wines, fire-works, &c. Any ordinary legitimate income could not support such extravagance—that is very clear. Then where does the money come from?

The members say the Club is not a political organization. Perhaps a few of the members do not hold office, but they do a great amount of secret political work. The recent exposures of the Ring have brought a few names publicly forward, and we now take the roll of membership of the American Club, from which we select the following names.

And a number of other smaller fry whose known incomes would not pay their current expenses at the Club.

The Young Men's Republican Association.

A new political element, which promises to be of considerable local prominence in the present campaign, is the organization (now steadily progressing) of Young Men's Republican Associations in the various Assembly Districts of the City. The object is to band together the Republican young men, principally those not connected with the regular associations, into a solid phalanx for duty during the campaign. The directing power will be a central committee composed of delegates from each district association.

As the work of conducting the elections has principally to be performed by the young men, it is seen how important it is that they should be united in purpose and spirit, and the necessity of a central body is obvious.

It is also proposed that the Young Men's Associations work as auxiliaries to the regular district associations, and these latter through the medium of the former will doubtless be largely recruited with earnest, energetic young men, the element that does the hard work in politics.

In all but a few Assembly districts, associations are already formed and delegates elected to a central committee, and the completion of the work is only delayed until these remaining districts, four in number, are organized.

The German Reformers.

The Central Committee of the German Reform organizations, Mr. Oswald Ottendorfer presiding, held a regular meeting at Beethoven Hall last night, when resolutions referring to patronage, submitted by a subcommittee of the Executive Committee, was referred back to the Executive Committee. The report complains of the exclusion of German applicants from employment in the Departments of Public Works and Parks.

SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' CONVENTION.

Address to the Soldiers and Sailors of the Late War by the Veterans' National Committee.

The following address has been issued by the Veterans' National Committee, calling for a general convention of the soldiers and sailors who served in the Union Army and Navy during the late war:

HEAD-QUARTERS VETERANS' NATIONAL COMMITTEE, FIFTH-AVENUE HOTEL,
NEW-YORK CITY, July 5, 1872.

To the Soldiers and Sailors who served in the Union Army and Navy during the late war:

COMRADES: The undersigned, a committee appointed for the purpose by a meeting of veterans from all sections of the country, who were assembled in Philadelphia upon the 8th day of June, in attendance upon the Republican National Convention, and which meeting unanimously resolved to abide by and support the nominations of said Convention, hereby invite you to meet in mass convention at Pittsburg, Penn., on the 17th day of September, 1872, for the purpose of expressing our unreserved belief that the destinies of this country for the ensuing four years should be under the protection of men who never faltered in the hour of our country's greatest danger. We believe that men should be placed in high positions of state who in the hour of our greatest peril gave that intellect, personal reputation, and personal faith in the justness of our cause which was necessary to save the country and place us in the position we now occupy.

We congratulate ourselves upon the fact that the Government, during the past three and one-half years, has been administered by one of our comrades, who has shown wonderful civil capacity in aiding in the reduction of the public debt, in conducting our foreign affairs with great skill, so that we now stand at peace with the whole world, and in preserving peace in sections of our country where sentiments were entertained calculated to disturb the reorganization of the States lately in rebellion. We have full faith in him as a peaceful man, because, had he felt disposed to exercise his power as a personal governor, he would have done it while nearly a million of men were in arms and under his command, instead of aiding, as he did, the rapid reduction of the army to a peace footing. We believe him to be honest, capable and courageous.

We believe that it will be a source of pleasure to all who battled for the Union to meet once more and revive the memories of our old campaigns.

We believe that an expression of the feelings and opinions of those who defended the nation on land and sea would at this time be most opportune.

We believe that such an expression would be regarded by all right-thinking men as one proper to be made; and that it would be productive of the most beneficial results.

We believe that our comrades universally desire that such measures shall prevail as will secure the greatest possible happiness and prosperity to the whole people.

We believe that our country's old defenders are actuated by no partisan or factious motives, but are in favor of good government, purity of public men and measures, and the elevation and purification of our institutions.

We believe that while all the old veterans are loyal as in the extreme, and utterly opposed to any scheme which would tend in the slightest degree to revive the heresy of secession, that they are desirous of extending charity and full forgiveness to all of their former enemies in the field who now recognize or who may hereafter recognize the great wrong that they have done to our country.

Believing as we do that great good will result from the meeting proposed, we most cordially and earnestly invite all our former comrades to meet with us at Pittsburg on the tenth anniversary of the battle of Antietam, Sept. 17, 1872.

Let us come together again as we did in 1861, sinking all partisan differences, take our stand now as then for our country, and, before and beyond all else, labor for her honor and glory.

Fraternally Yours,
Gen. A. E. BURNSIDE, Chairman.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT.

Address of Hon. Schuyler Colfax at Kalamazoo—The Perils Our Country Should Avoid.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., July 5.—Vice-President Colfax was the orator of the day at the celebration in this city yesterday. After speaking of the Fourth of July as our jubilee day, when patriotism enables us to say that we are all Democrats and Republicans, he remarked that our thoughts naturally turned at such time to the glories of the past and present of our nation, but that we should also improve the occasion to contemplate and resolve to guard against the possible perils of the future.

He quoted the striking contrast of the great Spanish Republican Castellar, in which he classes Asia as the continent of the past, with its theocracies, and East Europe as the continent of the present, with its conflict between ancient and modern ideas; while he hails America as the continent of the future, preserving the equilibrium between stability and progress, and harmony between liberty and democracy, destined to be the grandest civilization of all, if it guards against the danger and evil from without and within.

Mr. Colfax enumerated as some of the possible perils of the Republic: First, overtrading abroad, now settled by Government, State and railroad bonds, ultimately, however, to be paid, principal and interest, in American gold, and that nations, like individuals, should live within their means; second, The building of and going into debt abroad for too many railroads; third, increasing the debt, State and municipal, thereby local taxation far more burdensome than the national, notwithstanding our heavy war debt; fourth, increasing the power of great corporations, which should be wisely limited, especially as to "watering" stock, except by express legislative authority, as it rendered higher charges on the public necessary to make dividends; fifth, that corruption, whenever clearly discovered in national, State, or municipal government, should be sternly punished as a greater crime than private embezzlement or theft; sixth, the expansion of area, if it brings with it unwilling people or national hostilities, and unless, like marriage, with the hearty assent of both peoples; seventh, war, except as a last resort; and he meant by that not the avenging of some fanciful wrong, but the preservation of the national life, as bloodshed is justified by the preservation of individual life. He stated that many regarded centralization as one of the national perils; but that depended on what the speaker meant by centralization. For himself, he believed that a Government was only worth its necessary cost and burden to the governed, and when it signified and insured protection to its people, protection abroad, protection at home, protection of its existence from domestic or foreign foes. He closed by commenting on the extraordinary developments and grand possibilities of our nation, extending from the capes of Florida to the Behring Strait and the Arctic Ocean, and said the truest test of wise and beneficent legislation for our forty millions of people was that given by God himself to Moses: "There shall be but one manner of law for him that is born among you and for the stranger."

Mr. Colfax seemed in excellent spirits, and alluded to the fact that he was not any more a candidate for office, giving the appearance of one who felt his freedom and independence.

WASHINGTON.

Politics in Wisconsin—The Signal Office—Sunset Cox—Army and Navy Orders.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—The Greeleyites are quoting the utterances of every recruit, no matter how mean his calibre, because their recruits from the Republican ranks are so few and far between. Below is an extract from a letter from Wisconsin, which shows how the case stands in that State at the present time. The writer is an able Republican, with the coolest and most dispassionate judgment, and never given to overrating his own party's strength or underrating that of the enemy:

COLUMBUS, Wis., June 28, 1872.

I am both surprised and gratified at the state of political sentiment I find here on my return. Unless something occurs hereafter to change the character of the opposition, Grant will carry Wisconsin by from thirty to forty thousand. A portion of the Democratic Party, mainly the war element, together with the younger class of politicians, are for Greeley, and quite clamorous; but the old wheel horses are sour and disgusted, and take little or no stock in the attempt to put the party under the lead of Horace Greeley. Even the silly cry, "Anybody to beat Grant," has no music in it to their ears. They are not so crazy to beat Grant as to want to beat themselves to accomplish it. You hear old-line Democrats on every corner declare they will vote for Grant sooner than Greeley. It is my deliberate judgment that if the election were to occur to-morrow, Gen. Grant would get two Democratic votes for every Republican he would lose in Wisconsin.

INTERESTING TO VISITORS.

One of the places of interest to visitors in Washington is the Head-quarters of the Signal Service Bureau. The Capitol, the National Museum at the Smithsonian Institution, and the Model Room at the Patent Office have been for a long period the earliest and principal resorts of sight-seeing strangers. The home of "old probabilities" is becoming almost as famous, and is likely to be as much frequented. Since the new rooms for the observer's instruments were fitted up and occupied last Winter, they have been open under proper regulations, to visitors and some one of the pleasant and courteous gentlemen employed there will always explain the curious meteorological instruments and their uses, and the manner of observation. The rooms are nicely carpeted, and kept in perfect order. The instruments for the most part are inclosed in glass cases. The comparison which the Bureau has been able to make of the operation of various kinds of instruments, and the competitive tests made or now making promises to bring about great improvements. Already an instrument for registering the velocity and direction of the wind, invented by Lieut. Gibbons, an officer connected with the Bureau, has been adopted for the signal stations as being better adapted to the purpose than any instrument before constructed. Preparations are progressing for the establishment of a station of observation on Pike's Peak, and a sergeant will soon be dispatched.

DEATH OF THE ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN.

Mr. C. H. W. Meehan, Assistant Librarian of the Library of Congress, in charge of the Law Department, died suddenly of apoplexy this morning. Mr. Meehan had been employed at the Library with satisfaction to its patrons for many years. He father was Librarian of the Congressional Library several years ago.

SUNSET COX.

Hon. S. S. Cox returned here today to recruit for a few days prior to the extraordinary feat which he, as a prominent member of the Democracy, will be required to perform in Baltimore in swallowing Mr. Greeley. Mr. Cox is quite restored from his recent very severe illness, and will be able to endure everything in the approaching campaign except to see his own speeches made against Greeley when the latter was his competitor for Congress reproduced as a campaign document against his candidate for the Presidency.

THE LABOR REFORMERS.

A Party of the Future—What its Leaders Propose to Do.

CHARLESTOWN, Mass., July 5.—At a labor meeting at Blacksmiths' and Machinists' Hall this evening, E. M. Chamberlain said that the call for a conference of the Labor Party in New-York July 30 was an endeavor to assemble those who believe that the only honest course for Labor Reformers to pursue was to support candidates who stood upon a platform proposing explicit measures for the benefit of labor; that, as neither Grant nor Greeley was the representative of a party of that idea, Labor Reformers could go for neither. If a movement was not inaugurated somewhere else to place a candidate upon a platform guaranteeing the enactment and execution of short-time laws, convertibility of the currency, direct progressive taxation and minority representation, it remained in the power of the Labor Reformers to inaugurate the party of the future by making out-and-out working men's nominations; but that if danger was apprehended of being overslaughed by the advocates of Grant and Greeley, nominations should be postponed and an endeavor made to keep the Labor Reformers organized in hostility to both, for action at a more favorable opportunity.

CUBA.

Another Dash of Water in the Stock of the Spanish Bank—Valmaseda's Resignation—Fortnightly Slaughter of Cubans en Paper.

HAVANA, July 4.—The directors of the Spanish Bank have decided to raise the capital of the bank from six millions to eight millions. Numerous offers to subscribe to the new shares have been made. The notes of the Spanish Bank are quoted 1¾ per cent discount, and the indications are that there will be a further decline in their value.

The acceptance by the Spanish Government of the resignation of Capt.-Gen. Valmaseda causes much dissatisfaction among the residents of Cuba (Spaniards.)

The Cuban Major Tejado, with twelve armed and sixteen unarmed followers, surrendered at Holguin. The fortnightly report of the Government announces that 196 Cubans have been killed, 298 captured, and 970 of all classes have surrendered. The Spanish loss is 3 killed, 22 wounded and 3 bruised. The German corvettes Vineta and Gazelle, on the way from Kingston, Jamaica, to Norfolk, arrived off this port yesterday, and communicated with the German Consul at Havana.

A Lost Child—Freddy Leib.

Thirteen months ago Freddie Leib, aged five years, disappeared from the residence of his father, Prof. W. H. Leib, at Quincy, Ill. Since that time the sorrowing parents have sought far and wide for the boy, without much success until recently, when Mr. Leib learned that Freddy had been seen in Chicago, in custody or company of an Italian musicain. This leads to the supposition that the child had been stolen for the purpose of professional mendicancy. No further trace has been obtained of little Freddie, so Mr. Leib is now making a tour of the eastern cities in hopes of prosecuting a successful search. As the Italian musicians rendezvous in this City, it is believed that a clue may be gained better here than anywhere, so the friends of Prof. Leib have enabled him to offer a reward of $1,000 for the recovery of the child. Here is a case that should enlist the sympathies of every parent in New-York, and it is to be hoped that Mr. Leib will find his boy. Photographs of Freddie are now in the office of the Police Superintendent.

The following is a full description of the missing boy: Name, Freddie Leib; age, six years; stoutly built, dimples in chin and cheeks; blue eyes, dark brown hair, which curls when long; two crowns on top of head, where the hair separates or parts. Talks plain, and will doubtless remember that he has a little sister "Bessie" and a brother "Charlie."

AFFAIRS IN FRANCE.

The Liberation of the Territory—Prince Bismarck's Desire and President Thiers' Position—The Policy of the Executive—Attitude of the Assembly.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, June 21, 1872.

Nearly every day the few Press dispatches given us in the French journals contain one or more paragraphs concerning the payment of the war indemnity and the liberation of French soil, and if two are given they are pretty sure to be contradictory. The dispatch of today denies that of yesterday, and gives the "real state of the case" only to be denied to-morrow. Several of the English correspondents have also tried their hand at it, and it is safe to presume that many of these telegrams have been sent to you by cable, at no small expense, and to no end but confusion. The matter which forms the basis of these speculations is very simple, and the real trouble lies not in what arrangement should be made or can be made, but in finding the means for carrying out any arrangement whatever. You can rest assured that Prince Bismarck is anxious to get in his money, and that he will make no difficulties to any reasonable proposition. The latest supposition which comes by the Havas agency from Versailles, is that Count Arnim has agreed to the evacuation of the remaining departments on condition that the French Government pays one milliard in cash before the 15th of December, and gives bankers' bills for two milliards more before the 16th of January, the Germans to hold Belfort and Toul until the bills have fallen due and are paid. There is a great deal more in this than the writers who published it have supposed. I am of opinion that, so far from having raised difficulties or objections, Prince Bismarck has persistently encouraged the French Government in every one of its propositions. If he can get the money, either in cash or partly in approved paper, he will make no objection to a complete evacuation, and would be quite ready, in ten days after the payments were made, to take every man of his army across the frontier. But the other day, a partition of the indemnity was made among the different States of the Empire, and both officers and men are anxious to quit the hospitable soil of France.

THE PRESIDENT'S POSITION.

The troubles, however, are reserved for M. Thiers. One question, but not the great question, is the mode of raising this vast sum of money. Doubtless there is money enough in the country to cover a loan of this magnitude in a few days' times, if engineered by Rothschild and others, and the only doubt is the amount of confidence entertained by the financial world. Since the difference with the Assembly, and the President's defeat by the radicals in the last elections, public confidence has been greatly shaken. Close upon the above proposition, sent out as a ballon d'essai from Versailles, came the report that the terms had been accepted, and that a loan would be put upon the market. Immediately the fall of the Bourse was startling, producing almost a panic, and the great banker during a view of Versailles. What he told M. Thiers is not known exactly, but the current version is that the last elections have shown that, at the rate of progress now being made, it will take but a few months to give the radicals a victory throughout the country and make M. Gambetta the master of France. As this was too evident to need any demonstration, he had come, not to argue the matter with the President of the Republic, but to state the effect upon the world of finance, and was quite ready to say that a loan at this particular moment would be likely to prove disastrous. If the money was raised, the effect upon other values would be so great as to menace a crisis. In proof, M. Rothschild recalled the fact that before the elections, none of these reports had any effect upon the Bourse, while a simple rumor after these events, had sent nearly everything down about two per cent, an enormous fall for Continental markets. This same report goes on to say that M. Rothschild refused to say anything more, but insisted upon leaving the President to his own reflections I am told that such was not the case, but that the banker advised M. Thiers to say nothing more about a loan until he had drawn nearer to the majority in the Chamber, in order to give hope that he would soon form a Ministry from that section, and oppose the Radicals; but, even then, he thought it better to negotiate first through the leading banking establishments of the world, in order to secure one-half or more before putting the loan upon the market. Doubtless this would cost something, but it was safe. In face of the certainty that the Radicals would carry the country in the elections for a new Assembly, it was nearly certain that foreign capitalists would hesitate to risk their money unless at an interest equal to that paid by Turkey and some of the uncertain South American Republics.

M. THIERS' POLICY.

These are M. Rothschild's views, and they will be pondered over in connection with other facts, although we may suspect a certain amount of private interest in the matter. But even the king of finance can say nothing which will change the opinion of M. Thiers. He is satisfied that he can raise the money; and were it to his interest to do so, he would not hesitate before the idea of private loss, or of the fall in values, provided it did not menace his Budget. M. Thiers would not shrink from carrying out his own ideas, let the consequences be what they may upon the money market, for he has in view the great question to which I have referred above. This is in reality the cause of all present difficulties. The Assembly has voted its own term of office, and defined its own powers. Elected to make peace with the Germans, peace cannot be considered as being complete until the soil is free and the conditions of the treaty carried out. But while this was voted good care was taken not to vote the natural and logical consequence, and when the soil is free it may be that the Assembly will not regard its mandat at an end. M. Thiers does not dare go before the country with either the Bonapartists or the Radicals in a fair plebiscite, but he means to take his own time, work his own wires, bring on a conflict with the majority at a favorable moment, have everything prepared so that he can pay off the Germans in a week, declare the Assembly at an end, and then ask the country to sustain him by sending moderate Republicans to the second Assembly. This looks very much like a coup d'état; M. Thiers says it is simply une solution. This is why the semi-official Press and the Havas Agency is constantly supplied with rumors about the settlement, M. Thiers desiring, until he is quite ready, to keep up the idea that all sorts of objections come from the Germans.

ATTITUDE OF THE ASSEMBLY.

It is only within the past few days that the members of the Assembly have been impressed with the idea that this was the President's purpose. Naturally, the Right was thrown into a great state of alarm. The extreme Legitimists hold out their hands to the Bonapartists, believing this to be a move in the Orleans interest; the Bonapartists cry louder than ever for an appeal to the country and to universal suffrage freely exercised, promising to submit to the result, whatever it may me. The members of M. Gambetta's party rub their hands in glee, feeling that the victory will surely be to them, and M. d'Haussonville writes a long letter to the Journal des Débats for the purpose of showing that the country is lost unless M. Thiers promptly goes over to the majority, and rules the country by it. The Centres made an attempt at fusion, and finally about one-third of the Chamber met at the house of M. Johnstone, the young member for the Gironde, and came to the conclusion to send a delegation to remonstrate with the President. Three Orleanist Dukes were selected as a commission, to which were added Changarnier and St. Marc de Girardin, but M. Thiers treated the party in the most off hand way imaginable, and in reality sent them about their business. This was a point unprovided for, and when it became a question of resenting the President's conduct the fusion broke up worse than ever, and in utter confusion the Orleanist Dukes went back to the support of M. Thiers—it is supposed by advice of the Duc d'Aumale. The other factions are still in a great state of agitation, but it is extremely doubtful whether they can make any combination which will last for more than a day, or whether party divisions can be forgotten long enough to exercise any pressure whatever upon M. Thiers. Now, the question will be, what is to be the result? That is more than uncertain. It looks now as if M. Thiers would be utterly routed by the Radicals. If a new Assembly were elected at this moment, it would have a solid majority of that party, voting upon the command of Gamocetta, and the first conflict which came up between the Chamber and the Executive, would see that young gentleman voted into the Presidential chair. To conclude this review of French politics, I may remark that the three men last elected were claimed to be moderate Republicans by the Bien Public and other semi-official journals, but they have taken their seats on the extreme Left—upon the farthest end of the last benches—an act intended to show what their real feelings are and what their votes will be. Indictment of Kuklux in North Carolina.

From the Raleigh (N. C.) Era, July 4.

We are in possession of reliable information from head-quarters, that the national authorities are determined that Kukluxism shall be broken up in this and every other State, root and branch. If necessary, more troops will be sent to this State. Several hundred men—as many as two hundred in the County of Simpson—were indicted at the recent term of the United States Court in this city, for Kukluxism. No doubt other indictments in the Western District will be found against a great many Kuklux in several Western counties. The Government is convinced that its efforts to extirpate the infamous organization must be redoubled. Outrages by Kuklux will not be allowed to carry the election in 1872 as in 1870.

For prudential reasons, the names of the parties indicted are not made public. Twenty of the Simpson men are indicted for murder.

PACIFIC RAILROAD OF MISSOURI, SEVEN PER CENT., FREE OF TAX, SECOND MORTGAGE BONDS.

Road is over twenty-two years old, is well equipped and well managed. Its stock sells at 93 to 95. Allowing sixty per cent. for ordinary running expenses, the road earned in 1867 fifty-two per cent more than interest on First and Second Mortgage Bonds, and has increased its earnings each year, so that in 1871 it earned more than double the interest on First and Second Mortgage Bonds. A sinking fund of $50,000 per annum is one condition of the trust. We offer these bonds so that they return 8½ per cent income, without taking account of profit from the inevitable rise in the price of the bonds from the action of the sinking fund. We have selected these bonds as relatively the best investment offering in the market, and would invite the closest scrutiny to them. For price or further particulars, apply to

A 7 per cent. Bond for sale at 80 and interest on one of the great roads running from New-York City—on the third largest road in New-York State. The most desirable bond of all the Midland issues, affording the largest income and promising the greatest profit.

At 80 and interest they give about 9 PER CENT. PER ANNUM income on the amount invested, and by a rise to par would pay 25 PER CENT. PROFIT.

We believe them one of the safest and most profitable investments offered in this market for years.

BRIDGE COMPANY,

OF CHICAGO, ILL.

L. B. BOOMER, of Chicago, President.

(ORGANIZED AUG. 1, 1870.)

AUTHORIZED CAPITAL STOCK, $1,000,000

The whole amount of the authorized Capital Stock of this Company not having been issued, the balance thereof will be issued to subscribers at par, payments for same to be made in four installments of 25 per cent. each, viz.:

25 PER CENT. JULY 15, 1872.
25 PER CENT. AUG. 1, 1872.
25 PER CENT. SEPT. 1, 1872.
25 PER CENT. OCT. 1, 1872.

The Subscription Books now open at the office of the undersigned will be closed July 15, or as soon as the new stock is fully subscribed.

The total amount of stock issued at this time is $416,700, and on this basis the Company shows a present surplus of $136,280 97, and is now doing a flourishing business. One thousand men are constantly employed in their extensive works, and they now have on hand $1,250,000 of work for various railroads in the United States, among which may be mentioned the

CHICAGO, R. I. & PACIFIC,
CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN,
MICHIGAN CENTRAL,
MISSOURI PACIFIC,
ATLANTIC & PACIFIC, &c.

and the Company is now offered work to the amount of over $6,000,000, including some of the largest bridges ever built in this country; to accept of which, and further business, necessitates a larger working capital, as immense amounts of material have to be kept constantly on hand, and the Company are frequently obliged to receive, in part payment for their work, railroad and other bonds, which are perfectly good securities, but not always immediately marketable.

The career of the American Bridge Company, though brief, has already fully demonstrated the profitableness of the enterprise. The Company has constructed since its organization, and up to the 31st of December, 1871, a total of 35,137 feet of bridges, 18 turning tables, and 16 iron roofs, and pneumatic and screw pile substructures, costing $3,400,000, and have facilities for the construction of pneumatic piles unsurpassed by any Company in the country, and a capacity for the construction of at least 150 feet of bridges for every working day in the year.

The Iron Railroad and Highway Bridge at Leavenworth, of three spans of 340 feet each, and the Union Pacific Bridge across the Missouri River, of eleven spans of 250 feet each, were constructed by this Company.

The net profit arising from this business, as shown by the books of the Company up to the 31st of March, 1872, was the sum of $373,482 14, or at the rate of $224,089 28 per annum, being over 30 per cent. upon the capital stock then outstanding. With the proposed new structures, machinery, &c., the Company will have much greater capacity, and the proceeds of the increased issue of stock will enable them to buy material for cash, thereby making a saving of from $50,000 to $75,000 per year.

The Company can undoubtedly, on above basis, make dividends of from 20 to 25 per cent. per annum on the full amount of capital, $1,000,000, with a fair prospect of considerable increase.

The undersigned are prepared to give to those inquiring, the fullest details and entire satisfaction regarding the reliability of the Company's statements, and the unquestioned integrity and ability of its officers.

We confidently commend to capitalists the above, as an investment worthy their attention.

ABSOLUTE SECURITY

OVER 10 PER CENT. INCOME.

ARKANSAS STATE LOAN.

A LIMITED NUMBER OFFERED AT

70 Cents and Accrued Interest.

These Bonds were issued under act of the Legislature for the purpose of assisting the "Arkansas Central Railway," in accordance with section 6 of the Constitution of the State of Arkansas, which provides as follows: "The credit of the State or counties shall never be loaned for any purpose without the consent of the people thereof, expressed through the ballot-box," which act was submitted to the people at the general election held in November, 1868, and unanimously ratified by them. The Legislature of the State has no power to grant any additional aid whatever; consequently, the debt of the State cannot be increased, except by amending the Constitution through a vote of the whole people.

As an additional security, these bonds are guaranteed by the Arkansas Central Railway by special indorsement, recorded as a mortgage in every county through which the line passes, acting as a direct lien upon the property of the Company, its real estate, rolling stock and franchises.

It is also recorded that the "faith and credit of the State are solemnly and irrevocably pledged for the payment and redemption of the principal and interest of each and every bond."

Every possible safeguard surrounds them to protect the holder from the danger of corruption and fraud.

Unlike ordinary railway bonds, those now offered are negotiable at any time on the New-York Stock Exchange, as may be observed from the daily stock quotations.

The bonds are of the denomination of $1,000 each, payable to bearer, and therefore negotiable by simple delivery. The interest coupons attached to each bond are payable semi-annually at the office of the Union Trust Company, in New-York, by the Treasurer of the State, on the 1st day of October and April in each year, until the principal of the bonds is redeemed at par in 1898. LONG BRANCH RACES.

Last Day of the July Meeting at Monmouth Park.

Milesian Wins the Hurdle Race, Lyttleton the Three-Mile Dash, and Wade Hampton The Sequel Stakes.

The first meeting of the season at Monmouth Park has ended. It will hereafter be noted as the occasion on which two of the finest horses America has produced were for the first time brought together, and at the same time be remembered for the unexpectedly easy victory of the animal which was not the favorite. The management on the whole has been favored with a large amount of success, and the sport afforded the public has been quite up to the average. The last day's programme was marked by no remarkable attraction, but the attendance yesterday nevertheless was respectable. There were three races on the card—a hurdle race for all ages, two miles, for a purse of $600; a dash of three miles, for all ages, purse $1,000; and the Sequel Stakes, for three-year olds, $800, added to a sweepstakes of $50 each. The first of these events was won very handily by Milesian, the second by Lyttleton, and the third by Wade Hampton. Owing to the rain of the night before the track was heavy, and not favorable for making a brilliant time record, though it was expected that Lyttleton would have scored much better than 6:06 in the three-mile dash. The fortunate stables at the meeting are those of John Harper and August Belmont, the former winning four races and the latter three. All of the horses will immediately leave for Saratoga, and speculation is already rife as to the winner of the Saratoga Cup, it being asserted in certain quarters that both Longfellow and Harry Bassett will start in the race.

THE HURDLE RACE.

The sport of the day began with a hurdle race of two miles, over eight hurdles, which had the following seven entries, viz.: D. J. Bannatyne's ch. h. Milesian, 5 years, by imp. Mickey Free, out of Cornelian, by Wagner; R. Shea's br. c. Astronomer, 4 years, by Asteroid, out of Miss Carter, by imp. Sovereign; John F. Chamberlin's br. g. Impecunious, 4 years, by Tipperary, out of Lucy Fowler, by imp. Albion; Joseph Donahue's br. h. Blind Tom, 6 years, by Star Davis, out of Margravine, by imp. Margrave; Jas. Thompson's b. m. Lobelia, aged, by imp. Bonnie Scotland, out of Capitola, by Lexington; Coffin & Lawrence's b. g. Jim Tisdale, by Revenue, out of Louisa Jordan, and sr. g. Lochinvar, (formerly Allegro) 5 years, by Ulverston, out of Bridget, by Paddy Burns. The speculators were of the opinion that Milesian would capture the purse of $600, and therefore made him the favorite, as a glance at the quotations will show:

Milesian	$250	$360	$360	$370
Blind Tom	145	150	160	220
Lobelia	100	160	210	245
Astronomer	60	70	80	85
Impecunious	30	40	45	45
Jim Tisdale } Lochinvar }	85	115	150	110
Total	$670	$715	$1,005	$1,075

The hurdles were placed at the beginning of the turn, at the quarter-pole, on the backstretch, near the half-mile pole, and on the homestretch.

THE RACE.

After considerable delay they were sent off, and Lobelia assumed the lead, Milesian second, Blind Tom third, and the others together. When they reached the first hurdle, Lobelia went over first, Milesian second, Impecunious third, Blind Tom fourth. When they went round the turn Milesian rushed past Lobelia and assumed the lead, while Impecunious followed him up and was second, Lobelia third, Blind Tom fourth, Lochinvar fifth, Jim Tisdale sixth and Astronomer seventh. They now reached the second hurdle, at the quarter-pole, and before going over Blind Tom had got up to the second place. They all went over the obstacle beautifully in the following order: Milesian first, Blind Tom second, Impecunious third, Lobelia fourth, Lochinvar fifth, Astronomer sixth, and Jim Tisdale bringing up the rear. As they went down the backstretch, Milesian kept to the front, and made the running, leading Blind Tom a length, he being the same distance in front of Impecunious, who was four lengths ahead of Lochinvar. The third hurdle, near the half-mile pole, was jumped in the same order, except that Astronomer had taken the fifth position away from Lobelia. When they came round the lower turn Astronomer bettered his position, taking the fourth place away from Lochinvar. When they passed the three-quarter pole Milesian was still leading a length, with Blind Tom second, two lengths away from Impecunious, who was five lengths in the van of Astronomer, while Lochinvar was fifth, Lobelia sixth, and Jim Tisdale several lengths behind. They now came up the homestretch, and approached the fourth hurdle, which Milesian took still a length in the lead, with Blind Tom and Impecunious together, Lochinvar next, Astronomer, Lobelia and Jim Tisdale. They were now running on the flat, and Milesian increased his lead to two lengths, and thus passed the stand, while Impecunious was second, a head's length in advance of Blind Tom. When they went to the turn and over the fifth hurdle, their positions remained unchanged, but as they went round the turn, Lobelia left the fourth place and got second, and Astronomer followed up to the third place. Milesian still kept to the front, and went over the sixth obstacle easily, with Lobelia second, Astronomer and Blind Tom on even terms. Going down the backstretch Astronomer left Blind Tom, passed Lobelia and took the second place, but when they neared the seventh hurdle Gaffney urged Blind Tom forward, and, passing Lobelia and Astronomer, was soon up to the second place. The hurdle was jumped first by Milesian, Blind Tom second, Astronomer third, Impecunious fourth, Lobelia fifth, Lochinvar sixth, and Jim Tisdale seventh and far behind. On the lower turn Blind Tom closed rapidly on Milesian, who was, however, going under an easy pull. At the three-quarter pole the pair were together, with Astronomer four lengths behind them. The race now up the stretch, was between Milesian and Blind Tom, and they came over the last hurdle simultaneously, and an exciting race ensued to the score. Milesian shot out when nearing the stand, and won the race from Blind Tom by a neck; Astronomer third, Impecunious fourth, Lobelia fifth, Jim Tisdale sixth, and Lochinvar seventh. Time—4:15, a slow race.

THE THREE-MILE DASH.

The second race of the day was a dash of three miles, for all ages, purse of $1,000, in which there were but two entries, viz: John Harper's br. h. Lyttleton, by imp. Leamington, out of Fannie Holton, by Lexington, and H. P. McGrath's b. m. Susan Ann, 5 years, by Lexington, out of Roxanna, by imp. Chesterfield. The betting was heavily in favor of the game little horse of Harper's stable, but Susan Ann ran such a good mile on the previous day that it was thought that she would give Lyttleton a close struggle. She found many backers in the odds offered against her, but she disappointed them and cut a poor figure. The following were the figures in the betting:

Lyttleton	$1,050	$900	$550
Susan Ann	240	430	250
Total	$1,290	$1,330	$800

THE RACE.

The dram tapped, and Lyttleton was off two lengths in front, and immediately opened a gap of six lengths as they went round the lower turn. As they neared the quarter-pole, Susan Ann got a little closer to Lyttleton, and five lengths divided them at that point. As they went down the backstretch, Lyttleton was being pulled, and this allowed Susan Ann to get within three lengths of him, and they remained in this position all the way round to the homestretch, when Susan Ann got a little nearer, and when they came past the stand for the first mile but two lengths divided them. As they went round the turn for the second time, Lyttleton again opened away, and passed the quarter-pole four lengths in the front of his competitor. As they went down the backstretch, Susan Ann again made an effort to catch her game competitor, and when he reached the half-mile pole she was within three lengths of him, and closed the gap to two lengths at the three-quarter pole. In this way they came up the homestretch and passed the stand for the second time. At the turn Lyttleton went away from the mare again, and was three lengths ahead at the quarter-pole, but going down the backstretch Susan Ann got closer, and they were two lengths apart at the half-mile pole. As they came round the lower turn Susan made a determined effort to catch the fleet little Lyttleton, and was urged by whip and spur to do her best. She got her nose at his tail when near the three-quarter pole, but when they came up the homestretch, Lyttleton was allowed his head, and came away and won the race easily by two lengths in the very poor time of 6:06, averaging but 2:03 to the mile. The backers of Susan Ann were disgusted with the latter's performance, as they certainly expected her to run the three miles much below six minutes. The following is a

THE MONMOUTH SEQUEL STAKES.

The concluding race of the day and last of the meeting was the Monmouth Sequel Stakes for three-year olds, two miles, value $800, added to a sweepstakes of $50 each, play or pay, winner of the Jersey Derby Stakes to carry five pounds extra. There were twenty-four entries in the stakes, and five of them sported silk when they were called to face the starter. These were A. Belmont's br. c. Wade Hampton, by Asteroid, dam by Alexander Churchill, (Hamburg's dam); John F. Chamberlin's gr. c. Brennus, by Lightning, out of Brenna, by imp. Knight of St. George; also ch. c. Wheatley, by War Dance, out of sister No. 2 to Pryor; H. P. McGrath's b. f. Jury, by Lexington, out of Roxanna, by imp. Chesterfield; and Zeb. Ward's b. f. Cynthiana, by Tipperary, dam by imp. Hootin. Mr. Belmont's stable had shown such excellent form this year as to entry was a great favorite, but as he had won both the Monmouth Oaks and the Hopeful Stakes there were many of the opinion that either Jury or one of the Chamberlin's would capture the stakes, but in this they were disappointed, for Belmont thoroughly beat his competitors. The following was the betting on the result:

Wade Hampton	$750	$1,100
Wheatley } Brennus }	290	400
Jury	100	205
Cynthiana	90	145
Total	$1,290	$1,850

THE RACE.

After two false attempts they were sent off close together, Brennus showing the way, Jury second, Cynthiana third, Wheatley fourth, and Wade Hampton fifth. As they went round the turn Cynthiana took the second place from Jury, and then went up to Brennus and took the lead from him. Brennus now fell back to the fourth place, while Wheatley came up and was soon second. At the quarter-pole their positions were as follows: Cynthiana first, a length ahead of Wheatley, with Jury third, Brennus fourth, and Wade Hampton behind, under a long pull. As they passed down the backstretch Wade Hampton passed Brennus, taking the fourth position, but they were all close together. When they passed the half-mile pole, Cynthiana was still leading, with Wheatley second, a half length behind, Jury third, lapped with Wheatley, Wade Hampton fourth and Brennus fifth. As they came round the lower turn Wheatley and Jury were side by side, and both of them went up and lapped Cynthiana, while Wade Hampton was half a length behind them, Brennus a length in the rear. As they came up the homestretch Jury shook off Wheatley and Cynthiana, and when they reached the stand she was two lengths in front of Wheatley, Cynthiana third, Wade Hampton fourth and Brennus fifth. When they went round the turn for the second time, Jury was cutting out the work in fine style and was showing the way three lengths in front of the others, who were now running in a bunch. Jury got further away, and when they passed the quarter-pole she was four lengths ahead of Wheatley, with Wade Hampton third, Brennus fourth and Cynthiana in the rear and in trouble. When they went down the backstretch, Wade Hampton made play, and passing Wheatley, was soon running second and closing upon Jury. When they reached the half-mile pole, Jury was leading Wade Hampton but a length, but as they came round the lower turn Hampton was keeping up to the head of Jury, and passed the three-quarter pole on even terms with her. No sooner did they strike the homestretch for home than Jury and all the others got into trouble, and Wade Hampton galloped home the winner of the race with something like twenty lengths to spare, Jury second, ten lengths ahead of Brennus, who was the same distance in front of Wheatley, Cynthiana nowhere. Time—3:55¼.

BASE-BALL.

Defeat of the Forest Citys by the Atlantics—Score 10 to 3.

The Forest Citys, of Cleveland, suffered another defeat yesterday, their conquerers this time being the Atlantics, of Brooklyn, and the game taking place at the Capitoline. The Forest Citys went through the game with only eight men, Pratt being ill and Wolters absent for some reason peculiarly his own. In this dilemma Pabor was called on to pitch, the vacancy being made in the outfield. Under these circumstances, a spirited contest could not well be expected, and the game was not very creditable to either party, the Atlantics winning by superiority at the bat, which enabled them at once to take the lead and keep it up sufficiently to win by 10 to 3. On the winning side Barlow, Ferguson and Hall were distinguishable for good fielding, Holdsworth and Sweasy bearing off the palm on the other nine. The pitching of both Breitt and Pabor was very wild and irregular, and materially assisted in run getting.

The Grenadier Guards.

The Band of the Grenadier Guards, including the leader, Mr. Dan Godfrey, and Lieut.-Col. Flodyer, arrived in this City yesterday morning, by the steamer Bristol, from Boston. They were met at the dock by a body of policemen and a large crowd of citizens, and proceeded to the office of Mr. John G. Dale, the agent of the Inman line, where they were regaled with lunch. Their baggage was taken to the Grand Central Hotel, and the men spent the day in visiting Central Park and other public places in the City. In the evening they dressed in full uniform, with the exception of the bearskin hats, the latter being too warm, and proceeded up Broadway to the Academy of Music, their gay uniform attracting much attention. The men speak very highly of their reception in Boston, and are proud of the cross presented to them by Mr. Gilmore, but they all say that they never saw such hot weather. They will leave for Europe at 2 o'clock today, by the steam ship City of Antwerp, from Pier No. 45 North River.

Singular Mortality.

On the Fourth, Hugh McGuire, residing at No. 96 North Sixth-street, E. D., attended the funeral of one of his children. On returning home he found that his only remaining child had died during his absence. The anguish of his double bereavement seemed to crush him, and he died in less than two hours. The weight of this affliction has prostrated Mrs. McGuire, and there is but little prospect that she will survive the shock.

Excess of Mortality in 1872—Terrible Effects of the Heat During the Last Six Days—The Casualties Yesterday.

The first week of July, 1872, will be made memorable in the mortuary annals of New-York for the unprecedented number of deaths from all causes, but notably so for the mortality from sun-stroke. Judging from the number of deaths which have taken place in this City during the past six days from prostration by the heat, it is to be feared that before the Summer quarter shall have expired the total number of deaths from this cause will far exceed that of any previous year. Within the present century the death record under this head has been comparatively light, except in the years 1863, 1863, 1866, 1868 and 1870—the largest number occurred in the year 1866, when 310 fell victims to the heat. The following shows the mortality from this cause since 1845:

1845	7	1859	6
1846	34	1860	12
1847	11	1861	16
1848	21	1862	44
1849	36	1863	219
1850	20	1864	40
1851	21	1865	14
1852	17	1866	310
1853	260	1867	5
1854	62	1868	196
1855	50	1869	26
1856	33	1870	238
1857	16	1871	not yet published.
1858	43

Up to this year the largest number of deaths from sun-stroke in any one week, took place during the week ending July 21, 1866, when 184 deaths were registered. The mortality statistics for the week ending today will, it is believed, show that a larger number have succumbed to the heat. But it is not alone the larger number of deaths by sun-stroke during the past week, which attracts attention. The mortality record has ran far ahead of the average, in fact the deaths for the past week are more than double the usual number. For the six days ending yesterday, the mortality was as follows:

Sunday	149	Wednesday	302
Monday	184	Thursday	227
Tuesday	210	Friday	236
Total			1,348

The total number of deaths for the corresponding week in 1871 was 710, and in 1870, 641. When the deaths for today are added to the above, the total number will probably reach 1,500. Exclusive of the deaths set down as "sun-stroke," a large number of young children have been carried off during the past week, making the mortality in this class very excessive.

There was a percentible change in the temperature yesterday. The thermometer at the Central Park Mineral Springs, at noon, indicating only 85 against 93 the previous day, but at 6 P. M. it stood 83 against 79 on Thursday. The moderation in the temperature, slight as it is, has been productive of good results, as there are fewer casualties to report today.

The following observations show the temperature yesterday as recorded by Schultz & Warker at the Central Park Mineral Springs:

Temperature.	7 A. M.	12 M.	3 P. M.	6 P. M.
Degrees Fahr.	76	85	89	83
Stand of Bar. Inches.	29.82	29.88	29	29.89

The following record at Dickinson's drug-store, No. 3 Park Row, will show the changes in the temperature, yesterday, with the average for the same, as indicated by the thermometer: At 3 A. M., 74°; 6 A. M., 77°; 9 A. M., 79°; 12 M., 86°; 3 P. M., 92°; 6 P. M., 89°; 9 P. M., 78°; 12 P. M., 76°: average temperature yesterday, 81⅝°.

THE SEVENTH.

A Terrible Rain-Storm—Testing the Remington Rifle—Visitors to Camp Sherman—Miscellaneous Mention.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CAMP SHERMAN, SARATOGA, } Friday, July 5, 1872. }

We had a sharp experience last night of the less pleasant side of camp life. The weather had been unsettled throughout the day—alternate rain and sunshine—but in the evening heavy masses of cloud seemed to come up from all directions, and, meeting directly over the camp, they poured down a deluge of rain on the unhappy camp till after midnight. With the first flash of lightning and the first clap of thunder, there was a general cry of "To your tents, O, Israel!" and very few were bold to venture out again before morning. The guard must have enjoyed their twelve hours' duty immensely. Poor fellows. The stoutest boots could not have kept their feet dry an such heavy rain; especially as at most of the ports the men have to walk up and down in tolerably long grass. Some few complained of the rain coming through their tents, but this was the exception. The trouble, however, was a passing one. The sun rose in a clear bright sky, and at 6 o'clock was sufficiently hot for all ordinary purposes; and by guard-mounting time, the general salutation was: "Here's a scorcher." Men went about with as little clothing on as possible in order to keep cool for the company and battalion drills, which the Colonel had given orders should be carried out. This is the first time there have been any drills since the camp was formed, and the Colonel's patience would brook no further delay. The men executed all their manœuvres in first-rate style in spite of the heat, and as soon as they were dismissed there were four hundred heads in four hundred buckets of water—a coup d'oeil more amusing than elegant. A splendid breeze has since come up, and numbers of the men have been playing at base-ball.

The regiment have lately received the improved Remington breech-loading rifles, which all admit are vastly superior to the old weapons. The men naturally feel a little awkward with them in going through the manual at first, but they say that they will soon become accustomed to them, that it is only like having a new hat or a new pair of boots. This morning, Major Smith, Capts. Allason, Richardson, Arthur and Armorer Edwards left the camp to test the firing and loading capacities of the rifles. A suitable spot was soon found, a mark was placed on the trunk of a tree at the foot of a high bank, and the practice began. As far as I could judge, the officers were much pleased with the results—the ease of loading and the spring back of the empty cartridge on opening the breech. Rapidity of firing was then tried, and fifteen shots were fired from one rifle in a minute.

There have been many visitors to the camp. Carriages from Saratoga have been constantly arriving, bringing bevies of gaily-dressed ladies. They are all true to their sex. They are determined to see everything, and take pleasure in inspecting the men's private arrangements for their personal comfort. Some have been very ingenious, others have many little things which take the edge off the roughness of camp-life. The sideboard is omnipresent in the shape of a deal packing-case. But it is well stocked with little delicacies, cigars, claret and brandy. With the ladies ranged on a mattress, the men, in very decided fatigue dress, sitting on the floor, the flags, boughs of trees, Chinese lanterns, and absurb sign-boards decorating the tents, the scene is one which an artist might work up into a very humorous picture—especially the tents of the First Company, New-York friends of these gentlemen—the Emmons Light Guard, as they call themselves, the "Irrepressibles," as we call them—will have an opportunity of judging of what they are capable in the way of fun and revelry. Mr. Benjamin Gunnell, who has for many years past accompanied the regiment on its Summer excursions, is here taking a variety of photograhs of camp scenes. This evening he has taken an excellent photograph of the Irrepressible Squad, of which Corporal Hager is the Captain and chief devil, in their finderons get-up. Their uniforms are turned inside out; their hats are those large straw ones which 'longshoremen affect in hot weather, the brim turned inside the crown at the sides, and a red feather stuck in the top. The penny-whistle and tin-trumpet band, and the celebrated Quaker gun, are included in the picture. The orders for copies are already more than Mr. Gurney will be able to furnish for some time to come.

The great feature of the day is the ball to be given to the regiment this evening at the Grand Union Hotel, and many are the grievings and groanings among those who are on guard to-night. The ball is to begin at 8 o'clock and terminate at 1 in the morning. This is a very sensible arrangement, as the men have, of course, to be up at the usual time to-morrow. Col. Clark has issued orders for all men to be back in camp by 1½. Nothing has as yet been done in the way of decorating the large ball-room, but some flags will be arranged before the ball begins. It is expected that fully a thousand persons will be present. Many leading New-York families have arrived to-day in order to attend the ball.

Gen. McQuade, of Gov. Hoffman's staff, was present at the dress-parade this evening, and reviewed the regiment. He expressed his great gratification at the efficiency of the men and at the general and detailed arrangements of the camp, through which he was escorted by Col. Clark and his staff. This has been the first regular Sunday of the camp. The greatest strictness is observed in carrying out all regulations. The vigilant sentries kept me dancing about in the rain for nearly half an hour last night because I had omitted to learn the countersign before leaving camp. They knew me well enough, but had no alternative but to obey their orders to the letter.

The dress parade and review by Gen. McQuade this evening fully sustained the brilliant reputation of the Seventh. The lines were surrounded by carriages filled with visitors at the Saratoga hotels, and a crowd of promenaders gave no faint applause to the men as they marched past. The First Company, Capt. Allison, the Eighth Company, Capt. Smith, and the Seventh Company, Capt. Ely, marched splendidly, attracting universal attention and eliciting many bravos and cheers; but the general verdict was in accordance with the judgment of the Court. Gen. McQuade was most emphatic in his praises of the whole regiment, and declared their marching to be most excellent.

The ball given by the citizens at the Grand Union Hotel is now in its glory. The dancing having only commenced at 10 o'clock, and the men having to be in camp at 1½, they are making the most of their time and are waltzing to distraction. The court-yard garden of the hotel is lit up with Chinese lanterns, and is crowded with the hotel guests, presenting a scene something like the Vaux-hall of thirty years ago. On the piazza outside the ball-room the regimental band, at Grafulla's bidding, is playing some of Strauss' last waltzes in a style that appears to make the dancers wish that they occupied the ball-room orchestra. Should the guests continue much longer to pour into the ball-room at the rate they are now doing they will perform the acrobatic feat of dancing on their heads.

I reopen this dispatch to say that I have just been mysteriously whispered that the irrepressibles, dreading the enforced quiet of Sunday, are busy preparing some mischief for to-morrow night which is to whip all creation. So, marvelous conception has considerably aroused my curiosity.

Three Ladies Drowned.

The Milwaukee Sentinel affords the following explanation of the circumstances attending the drowning of three ladies at Janesville, Wis., on Sunday evening last, the mere announcement of which was brought by the telegraph:

"A short distance above town, in the rear of the residence of MARK RIPLEY, a party of ladies and girls went into Rock River to take a bath. One of the number, Miss LULU HARSON, got beyond her depth, and shouted for assistance. Miss LUCY SMITH went to her aid, and was drawn into deep water. Their shouts alarmed Mrs. MARK RIPLEY, who was in the house, some twenty rods from the river, and in a state of frenzied excitement, she rushed to the river bank and plunged in with the hope, it is supposed, of rescuing the drowning girls. The three sank together, and did not rise again. Their bodies were recovered shortly afterward. Miss HARSON has a mother at Baltimore, and Miss SMITH a father and sister at Fort Dodge, Iowa. Mrs. RIPLEY leaves a husband and a child."

THE FANNIE EXPEDITION.

Capture of More of Her Company and Discovery of More Cargo—Her Hull Worthless.

HAVANA, July 3.—Eight more men of the Fannie's expedition have been captured. Fifty-four cases of ammunition have been found on the beach, where it was buried by the crew of the Fannie. Twenty-two of the expeditionists are still at large, but the Spaniards express themselves confident that all will be captured.

The Spanish gun-boats are actively at work. The Alarma brought a portion of the cargo of the Fannie to Baracoa. The officers of the Alarma have inspected the hull of the Fannie, and conclude that it was so badly damaged by fire as to be worthless.

Gen. Ryan's Account of the Adventure—Escape and Arrival at Nassau of Twenty-two of the Crew.

NASSAU, July 1, via KEY WEST, Fla., July 5.—Capt. Speed, Gen. Ryan, Capt George Brown, the agent of the steamer Fannie, and twenty-two of the crew of the Fannie, have arrived here. They make the following report:

"The steamer Fannie struck on a reef on the coast of Cuba, and after remaining there between thirty and forty hours, during which time the coal of the steamer was thrown overboard to lighten her, the party on board succeeded in safely landing two pieces of cannon and several thousand stand of arms. As the Fannie could not be floated, she was set on fire and totally destroyed. The party then launched the ship's boats and started for the Bahamas, and succeeded in reaching Long Island after a sail of three days. The whole party were brought to Nassau by the schooner Charles, arriving here on the 29th ult., and will sail for New-York today.

Gen. Ryan reports having received a knife-wound, but as the knife struck a piece of metal on his person, but slight injury was done. The perpetrator of the deed was one of the expeditionists."
